12 Paratroopers Killed in Glider Crash

5 Injured As Freak Gust Hurls Craft Out of Sky

Training Ship Had Just Cut Loose From Its Tow at Georgia Air Base

Columbus, Ga., Jan. 13 (AP).—A freak gust of wind buffeted to earth a glider full of paratroopers today as it swooped in for a landing at nearby Lawson Air Force Base, killing 12 of the 17 men aboard. The survivors were injured, four seriously.

"The glider just disintegrated when it hit the ground," said Maj. Lloyd E. Wills of Hartford, Ala., an Airborne Infantry instructor who was standing at the edge of the runway as the glider crashed.

All aboard the lightly built craft were paratroopers except an Air Force pilot who was guiding it smoothly to a landing when an updraft hurled it to disaster. The pilot was among the seriously injured.

The glider had just unhooked from its C-82 tow plane in company with another gliderload of airborne troops when it crashed about 4:30 p. m. (EST).

Landing Approach Normal

"I saw the two gliders making a normal landing approach," said Corpl. James P. Harr of Detroit, Mich., who watched from the control tower at Lawson Base, a part of the huge Fort Benning Army reservation.

"Everything appeared normal," Harr said, "so I turned to look at the C-82 that had released them. Then I turned back to look at the gliders and saw a pile of debris out there. Crash crews were pulling out for the scene.

"I notified all the necessary agencies. Then I looked out at the wreckage through binoculars and what I thought was debris turned out to be bodies."

Witnesses said the wind gust tipped the glider and one wing dug into the ground, making a fulcrum as the craft flipped over in a giant eartwheel and burst with an ear-splitting crash.

Thousands Trained There

More than 10,000 airborne troops are trained every year at the big Fort Benning base, which provided the basic schooling for most of the famed paratrooper units in the last war.

Until today there had not been a glider fatality since 1946, and it was the first fatality of any type in airborne training at the post since last year, the Fort Benning public information office said.

The troops, members of Company A of the airborne battalion in training, were due to make their final jump Saturday to qualify a full-fledged paratroopers.

Names of the dead and injured were withheld pending notification of next-of-kin.

Navy Approves 1500 Dwelling Units in Area

Construction of approximately 1500 dwelling units for Navy and Marine Corps personnel in the Washington area has received preliminary approval by the Navy Department.

Of the total of 1502 units to be built, 950 are planned for the Naval Air Test Center at Patuxent River, Md.; 450 units will go to the Marine Corps School at Quantico, Va., and 102 units will be built at the Indian Head, Md., Naval Powder Factory.

The Navy plans to select private firms for the three construction projects. Details will be submitted to the Federal Housing Administration Commissioner under provisions of the National Housing Act.

Myers Held For Grand Jury In Girl's Death

By Jean Reiff
Post Reporter

A coroner's jury yesterday held Ralph Willard Myers, 44-year-old window-shade salesman, for action of the grand jury in the abortion-death of Mrs. Nina Cogar Campbell.

The jury deliberated only 20 minutes before returning a verdict which named him responsible for the death of the 19-year-old mother of two.

Four witnesses told how arrangements were made for the abortion and how the young woman was found, dead and sadistically beaten, in the apartment of an educational director of nursing at 1321 Fairmont st. nw., January 5.

Myers, who lives at 2110 N. Lincoln st., Arlington, listened attentively but without change of expression to each witness. He did not take the stand.

Still unexplained at the end of the inquest was how or why the young woman had been beaten about the head and entire body.

Noticeably upset and at times on the verge of tears, the slain woman's husband, Carlton Campbell, 20, of 4800 O st., Hillside, Md., told the jury he knew his wife was going to have an abortion performed on January 4.

"I never agreed to it, but I didn't try to stop her. Anything she wanted was all right with me—I loved her so," he explained.

He said he himself started to drive her to the Fairmont st. apartment that night. His brakes went bad, however, so she was taken there by his aunt, Mrs. Mabel Earnshaw, he testified.

"My aunt told me she left my wife alone in the apartment with Myers, while she and the nurse to whom the apartment belonged went for a walk. When they got back, my wife was lying un-

Trawler Rescues Lad Lost at Sea, Seeking Sweetie

Arbroath, Scotland, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—A trawler 200 miles at sea today rescued a hungry 14-year-old boy who tried to sail a fishing boat singlehanded across the bleak North Sea to visit his Belgian sweetheart, Marie. He was far off course.

The trawler Reptonian picked up John Guthrie in an "exhausted and distressed condition" and took his 50-foot craft, Girl Jean, in tow. The youngster said he had had nothing to eat since he "borrowed" the Girl Jean and set out two days ago.

John and Marie met in Arbroath when she was vacationing.

Davis, Wadsworth, Hear Slugged Owner Tell of $200 Loss

By Edward F. Ryan

Congressmen probing District crime hit the investigating trail in person last night, and checked into an armed holdup during their surprise tour of Washington after dark.

The Congressmen were Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.), chairman, and Representative James W. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.), newest member of the special House committee investigating Washington crime and law enforcement.

The holdup, about 8:45 p. m., brought the Congressmen racing in a police headquarters cruiser from Southwest Washington to a grocery store at 1720 1st st. nw.

Its owner, Louis Lipsky, 58, had been hit on the head and robbed of $200 while several members of his family watched a television program of "We, the People" in living quarters adjoining the store. Lipsky said he didn't know whether the man struck with his fist, or with the gun he was carrying.

Lipsky's wife, Ida, witnessed the holdup from a rear door of the store. Another relative, who declined to give his name, said he chased the robber out of the store. He said a man standing near the entrance and another in a car offered him a ride to chase the fleeing robber.

He declined the ride, chased the man about a block on foot, and returned to find the other two gone. Police broadcast a radio lookout for the three men:

1. A light-brown-skinned man with a long face, 30 to 35 years old, 5 feet 10 inches tall, of medium build, wearing an Army field jacket and gray felt hat and carrying a long-barrelled gun.

2. A dark-skinned man, 5 feet

Mrs. Caraway, In Oxygen Tent, Talks to Truman

Mrs. Hattie W. Caraway, 71, former United States Senator from Arkansas, was reported in satisfactory condition but under an oxygen tent yesterday at George Washington University Hospital.

A member of the Senate for more than 13 years from November, 1931, to January, 1945, Mrs. Caraway became ill and was taken to the hospital Wednesday.

A nephew, Lewey Caraway, custodian of the Senate Office Building, said his aunt, while seriously ill, appeared cheerful and was able to talk easily.

In fact, he said, she talked yesterday on the telephone with President Truman who called to inquire about her health. President Truman and Mrs. Caraway served together in the United States Senate.

Miss Franklin Sobs in 5-Hour Trial Grilling

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Bernice Franklin, who turned State's evidence 11 months ago to become the Government's star gambling witness, burst into tears on the witness stand late yesterday, seconds after she ended a raking cross-examination of her personal life with the faltering words:

"I have always tried (to lead a legitimate life). Whether I've succeeded or not is something else again."

The pretty redhead had been under withering cross-examination for five hours in District Court yesterday before she broke down.

The jury trying her former boyfriend Attilio Acalotti and two others on lottery charges was still filing out of the courtroom, when she covered her face and sobbed.

Before the outburst defense attorneys had brought out Miss Franklin lived with Acalotti as man and wife for almost a year. The Government brought out in redirect examination that Miss Franklin had intended to go "legitimate" and to leave Acalotti many times before she finally did leave him because he refused "to get out of the rackets".

It was Ford, on re-cross-examination, who reduced Miss Franklin to tears, asking question after question about her personal life without interruption from Hitz.

"When you talked about going legitimate," Ford asked, "was that at a time when you were living with Acalotti in adultery?," his voice reaching a crescendo on the last word.

"Yes," she replied softly after a long pause.

"You say you were embarrassed by Acalotti after you left him by his interfering with your other social engagements. Did any of these social engagements involve

Rules Group Asks Return Of Old Power

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

In defiance of the Administration leadership, a House Rules Committee coalition yesterday voted 9 to 2 to restore the key group's former vast power to control what legislation goes before the House.

A resolution by Representative Eugene Cox (D., Ga.), repealing last session's leadership-supported rules reforms, was approved by the committee and ordered reported to the House.

The upset was variously interpreted as a grab by the Rules group for its old powers, Southern opposition to pending FEPC legislation and a Republican blow at "Fair Deal" spending. If approved by the House, it could have the effect of killing fair employment practices legislation.

Combination of Factors

A combination of all three factors entered into the vote, which followed close on the heels of sharply controversial FEPC hearings, and consideration of two leadership-approved bills involving relatively small spending.

Net result of the committee revolt was to sidetrack for the time being a slate of eight bills being readied for action by the still-idle House. Most of the bills had the blessing of the leadership and the support of President Truman.

Coalition leaders denied the blow was aimed at Speaker Sam Rayburn. Rayburn appeared mildly surprised at the move, but declined to issue any statement for the time being.

But Rules Chairman Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.), who with Representative Ray J. Madden (D., Ill.) cast the only two votes against restoration of the committee's old powers, denounced the "coalition" and questioned whether the House would back it up.

Can Delay It Ten Days

Sabath told reporters he intends to wait three legislative days before reporting the action to the House, and another seven legislative days before calling up the Cox resolution. That is the full time he is permitted to wait under the rules.

Sabath's delay thus would hold up House action on the rules change until the next "discharge day," Monday, January 23, and give House Labor Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.) possibly his last chance to call up the FEPC measure under last session's new discharge rule. Even then, Lesinski cannot get the bill before the House unless Rayburn recognizes him.

The new rule, ordered repealed by the Cox resolution, clipped the Rules Committee's powers to block legislation by empowering committee chairmen to call up reported measures on special discharge days after waiting 21 days for the Rules group to act.

Representative Herman P. Eberharter (D., Pa.) was the author of the rules reform adopted at the outset of the Eighty-first Congress. At that time a House revolt was in full swing against the pigeonholing powers of the Rules Committee. The reform became House

Reds Leave As U. N. Bars China Ouster

Security Council In 6-3 Vote Rejects Russians' Demand To Evict Nationalists

Lake Success, Jan. 13 (NYHT).—The Soviet Union walked out of the United Nations Security Council again today when the Council, by a vote of 6 to 3 with two abstentions, rejected the Russian demand for immediate expulsion of Nationalist China.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Jacob Malik, who had walked out Tuesday but returned yesterday, said before today's walkout he would not be back until the Nationalists were unseated. He added that any Council action taken while the Nationalists retained their seats would be illegal in Russian eyes.

The United States and France immediately denounced that attitude and the Council, including India and Yugoslavia, which had voted with the Soviet Union on the ouster, rejected the Russian declaration by proceeding with the next order of business.

Two Nations Abstain

As a further slap at the absent Russians, the Council agreed to return to the president's chair Chinese Delegate Dr. Tingfu F. Tsiang, who had stepped down in favor of Cuba during consideration of the Russian demand.

The stage was set for today's walkout when Dr. Carlos Blanco, of Cuba, emergency president, called for a vote on the Russian demand. A Council decision requires seven votes, but the Soviet proposal was supported only by Russia, Yugoslavia and India, all of which have recognized Communist China.

Norway and Great Britain, which also have recognized the Peiping regime, abstained. The United States, France, Egypt, China, Ecuador and Cuba voted no.

Malik, who knew he was in for a defeat, but who apparently was trying to convince the Chinese Communists of the depths of Russia's friendship, began to read a prepared statement.

"Fostering Lawlessness"

The United States, he said, and those countries that followed the Americans, were fostering lawlessness in the U.N. by voting for the Nationalists. This, he added, showed the United States held "narrow egotistic military interests" above the interests of the U.N.

Malik and his aides then gathered up their papers and briefcases and walked out.

10,000 Civilians Still to Lose Jobs, Sec. Johnson Says

Secretary of Defense Johnson said yesterday that the defense establishment has let out 6300 more civilians than he forecast and there are "at least 10,000 more to go."

As of December 31, Johnson told reporters, this phase of his economy campaign had resulted in cutting 141,300 civilians from the payroll, against the 135,000 predicted.

The Secretary gave the figures to reporters at the White House after a conference with President Truman. This meeting was on something else—cutting down on the amount of real estate and industrial and command installations held by the armed services. This, too, is related to the Johnson economy campaign and he said substantial sums are involved. But he was unable to supply definite figures or give examples of where the services might get rid of some of the holdings.

Rusk Sights Sino-Russian Clash Ahead

Philadelphia, Jan. 13 (AP).—A high-level State Department official said in a speech today that the Chinese Communist revolution is "not Russian in essence" and does not aim at dictatorship.

Dean Rusk, Deputy Undersecretary of State, also told a regional conference of the World Affairs Council here that "the United States expects no formal armed aggression from Russia either in the East or West at the present time."

Rusk declared that "there is a conflict coming between Chinese nationalism and Russian imperialism masquerading as world communism."

Rusk likened the revolution in China to the American revolt against the British, but said it is "subject to perversion." This apparently meant that it could eventually fall under the Soviet sway.

"Americans would not want to freeze conditions in the Far East," he stated. "What we are seeking is a direction for the revolution."

It was then that he declared that

'Know-How' Program Called Supplement By Foreign Aid Chief

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

President Truman's Point Four program would supplement, rather than conflict with the Marshall Plan, ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman told Congress yesterday.

In testimony before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Hoffman cited measures already taken in collaboration with the State Department to prevent conflict. This agreement, he pointed out, provides that Point Four operations will generally not be undertaken in Marshall Plan countries and that they will be applied to their dependencies only after "coordination."

As a matter of fact, said Hoffman, the result of a properly administered Point Four program should be to create and enlarge markets necessary to those countries being helped by ECA funds. He saw the "bold new" plan also as a supplement to Marshall Plan aid after that is discontinued in 1952.

Hoffman noticeably impressed the committee when he made the point that "you can't export know-how." He added:

"You can create conditions where people will want to import know-how. We have learned, possibly the hard way, to work

Reds Charge U. S. Steps Up Spying; New Purge Hinted

Moscow, Jan. 13 (AP).—The Soviet navy newspaper, Red Fleet, charged today the United States and other Western countries are making all-out efforts to get Russian military secrets. It bade all "Soviet warriors" to be on guard.

The charge quickly followed announcement that the death penalty had been restored for crimes of treason, spying and sabotage.

(This aroused speculation Soviet Russia might be in for another purge, possibly similar to the blood purge of the 1930s, when hundreds were jailed and executed to wipe out any possible opposition to Stalin.)

Foreign Relations Committee Agrees To Hear Johnson and Bradley in Dispute

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee finally agreed yesterday to invite Louis Johnson, Secretary of Defense, and Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to testify on the Formosa controversy.

The committee took its decision under insistent pressure from Republican critics of the Administration's Far Eastern policies, and over the stubborn protests of Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.).

The pressure has been growing ever since Johnson and the Joint Chiefs were reported to favor at least an American military mission to advise the Chinese Nationalists on Formosa. Connally protested that he saw no point in calling the defense leaders, since President Truman had already ruled against sending military aid or advice.

But the Republicans on the committee, obviously with some help from Democratic members, overruled him.

The committee voted after Secretary Acheson had paid a return visit to finish his testimony begun in an all-day session on Tuesday.

Connally told reporters that Acheson had dealt chiefly with Latin America, one area he had not covered in his earlier survey, and had drawn a generally encouraging picture.

But committee members' questions brought Acheson back to the Far East, and one who questioned him at length was Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), a leader of the group that wanted active American efforts to keep Formosa out of Communist hands.

Senator William F. Knowland (Calif.) and four other Republicans not on the committee were present again as invited "observers," and this time had their chance to question the Secretary without, apparently, getting much satisfaction.

Acheson did say that he would submit later the State Department's views on continuing to let the Nationalists on Formosa use an estimated 94 million dollars of Economic Cooperation Administration funds. The authority to spend these funds expires February 15.

The Secretary also said the State Department was seriously considering the dispute in the U. N. Security Council over

Capitol St. Span To Be Dedicated At 10 A. M. Today

The $5,400,000 South Capitol st. bridge, more than four years in the making, will be opened to traffic today with dedication ceremonies at 10 a. m.

The ceremony, to be held at the Anacostia end, will include an address by Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, acceptance speech by Joseph V. Moran, president of the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations, cutting of the ribbon bands playing — across the bridge and back.

District Director of Highways J. N. Robertson said the four-lane span can carry a maximum of 50,000 cars a day. He expects an immediate traffic load of about 25,000 daily.

The new bridge is expected to ease considerably traffic tie-ups on the three bridges—particularly the Eleventh st. bridge—now connecting downtown Washington with the newly developed areas east of the Anacostia River. The Highway Department hopes to start work this year on a fifth bridge across the Anacostia at East Capitol st.

Work on the South Capitol st. bridge—which has not yet been named—was started in December, 1945. Operations ceased during the summer and fall of 1947, however, when the District was forced to reject too-high bids on the superstructure and go back to Congress for more funds.

Statistics Cited to Prove Lack Of National Emergency in Coal

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The Federal Government officially joined the current battle of coal statistics with figures to back up President Truman's belief that there is no national coal emergency.

The statistics, released last night by the Interior Department, revealed that retailers sold 25 percent more coal to householders during the last four months of 1949 than during the same period last year.

The Government figures also showed that the stockpiles of retail coal dealers around the Nation were higher on January 1, 1950, than on February 1, 1948, and on March 1 and April 1, 1949.

The Interior Department, it was understood, gave President Truman a preview of these latest statistics and advised the Chief Executive that coal stocks are not low enough at the present time to justify declaration of a "national emergency" and invoking of the Taft-Hartley Act against John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers.

The survey did not cover home stockpiles, but officials believe that the increased sales of retail coal during last fall would indicate that consumers have been stocking up because of fear of scarcity.

The Interior Department said

Reds Barred as Liberals Map 'Antiseptic' Civil Rights Rally

A problem that has long plagued non-Communist American "liberals"—how to keep the Reds from taking over their meetings—has been vigorously attacked in plans for an "antiseptic" conclave which starts here Sunday.

The National Emergency Civil Rights Mobilization has had to turn down scores of violently eager self-invitations from Communist-front organizations to their three-day meeting.

As Henry Moon, who is handling the Mobilization's publicity, patiently put it: "Kind of difficult to keep those guys out."

But the Mobilization, which is anxious to concern itself with getting the President's civil rights program made law and not with a dialectical discussion of the difference between Tito and Moscow communism, believes it has worked out as air-tight a system as might be lying around. Here's how:

As a starter, no Communist-front organizations were invited to participate. Thus all CIO unions are taking part—except the 11 believed Communist-controlled.

For another thing, each delegate must bring a letter on the official stationery of his organization certifying him as a delegate. The letter must be signed by a high official of the organization. A hawk-eyed credentials committee will examine these letters.

Unwanted organizations inviting themselves, according to Moon, include the Civil Rights Congress (in a 7-page letter), the Progressive Party, the American Labor Party, the suspended CIO unions, and the Young Progressives of America.

The 57 groups sponsoring the Mobilization include the Americans for Democratic Action, the American Veterans Committee, the Association of Catholic Trade Unionists, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and all right-wing CIO unions.

The conference is scheduled to hear Senator Scott Lucas (D., Ill.), Senate Majorty Leader, and Senators Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) and Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.).

21st Amendment Raised

Congress' Right to Ban Ads For Liquor Is Challenged

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

One of the men who helped draft the Twenty-first Amendment told Congress yesterday that it has no authority to pass the proposed Langer bill to bar liquor advertising from interstate commerce.

Clinton M. Hester, Washington lawyer, appearing for the United States Brewers Foundation, stirred the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee with his testimony.

The Twenty-first Amendment, which repealed the Eighteenth or Prohibition Amendment, limits the authority of Congress, Hester said. The Senate Judiciary Committee in 1938, Hester said, recognized this when it reported that the Government's participation in the liquor problem "was to be limited to protection for the dry States."

"Congress has no authority," Hester declared, "to make it a Federal offense to violate a State law which would prohibit the use of the radio or television by the alcoholic beverage industry within the State."

The only authority Congress has, he said, is to make it a Federal offense for anyone to ship intoxicating liquors into a State which prohibits the importation of such liquor.

When the repeal amendment was started, Hester was legislative

Phones In Congress Tapped, Rankin Says

Election Tactic

Simon Legree Not a Villain, NLRB Rules

Simon Legree—whip, whiskers, and all—is no villain so far as the National Labor Relations Board is concerned.

The board yesterday rejected a protest of the CIO Textile Workers that Simon's whip and antics, used to get out the vote, were unfair electioneering tactics.

The Legree affair occurred last April, at the Charroin Manufacturing Co., San Diego, Calif. The CIO Textile Workers at the time was seeking to become the collective bargaining agent for the company's 320 employes. The union was rejected in the ensuing ballot.

The CIO Textile Workers then asked the board to throw out the election returns, and hold another vote, on the grounds that the management had conducted unfair campaign activities, such as bombarding its employes with literature and speeches to get out and vote.

On the day of the election, the plant manager showed up in a Simon Legree costume, and dashed among the employes cracking a whip and exclaiming: "You must vote. You gotta vote." This was an unfair practice, the union maintained, because the conduct of Simon Legree was such as to cast ridicule on the election and thereby make a fair election impossible.

At the hearings, the plant manager testified that he had meant no offense to the dignity of the NLRB and the integrity of its representation elections. The union had been depicting him as a Legree-like character, the manager said, so that he reacted by dressing appropriately for the election.

Commented the NLRB gravely: "None of the employes who witnessed the event . . . believed the plant manager's conduct to be directed at the board. In fact, it was considered to be no more than a humorous incident in the course of an election campaign.

"In our opinion, the event has no such significance or effect that it can be said that Government procedures were so unfavorably portrayed as to make a free and untrammeled election impossible."

Representative Rankin (D., Miss.) yesterday demanded an investigation of what he termed unauthorized tapping of congressional telephones and intimated the White House might be having the same trouble.

Support for his views came privately from several members of Congress but inquiries at the White House drew a blank.

"I've never heard of any tapping here," said White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross. "And I never heard anybody here complain of tapped wires."

On the basis of his own belief and that of some of his colleagues on the Hill, Rankin said he would introduce a resolution Monday calling for an investigation. He said he would ask that it be made by the House Un-American Activities Committee.

At least one member of Congress said he had detected an actual tap on his telephone by calling in private technicians. He said he could not say who was doing the tapping but that he had suspected tampering with his home telephone for some time.

He said the tap in the case detected was done by means of a device which could be clipped onto the incoming wires and quickly removed.

Another member said he would no longer talk "off the record" with reporters over his office telephone. The line is tapped, he said, and "I don't want on any kind of record the things I discuss off the record."

The third member said he would not discuss over his telephone "anything I don't want spread all over Washington."

It's nothing new, declared Rankin, but has "been going for some time." And, he told a reporter, "you might contact the White House."

As has been recorded, the White House hadn't heard of it.

The President Was Tickled

POSTER GIRL MAKES A HIT—It would have been hard to find two more pleased persons in Washington yesterday than Linda Brown and Harry Truman. The 5-year-old 1949 March of Dimes poster girl from San Antonio, Tex., tickled the President's ear with childish delight. And Mr. Truman obviously enjoyed it. Linda and other poster girls and boys past and present were at the White House to launch the 1950 campaign to raise money to fight infantile paralysis

Mrs. Harry S. Truman will make the first contribution to the "March of Dimes" in ceremonies in front of the Capitol Theater at 12:15 p. m. today.

This will launch the 1950 fund raising campaign for the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Meeting the First Lady for the opening ceremonies will be Wanda Wiley, 8, of Austin, Tex., the 1950 "March of Dimes" poster girl. Four poster children of previous years are also in Washington for the event.

They are Donald Anderson, 9, of Warm Springs, Ore.; Nancy Drury, 7, of Louisville, Ky.; Terry Tulles, 5, of Laurel, Miss., and Linda Brown, 5, of San Antonio, Tex.

The children visited the White House yesterday and met President Truman.

Commissioner John Russell Young, honorary chairman, and Edgar Morris, general chairman, also will be present at today's ceremonies.

Senate Sets Vote on Oleo Amendment

The Senate will vote at 1 o'clock Tuesday whether to substitute a butter-industry amendment for the Senate Banking Committee bill removing taxes from all types of oleomargarine.

Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) yesterday got unanimous consent for the vote on the substitute and on all amendments "germane to the issue" Tuesday.

This means that the civil rights amendments, proposed by Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.), and others repealing other excise taxes offered by Senator Hugh Butler (R., Nebr.) will be attacked by supporters of the committee bill in other ways. Lucas said Wednesday he would move to table the civil rights amendments, which would tie fair employment practices, poll tax repeal and antilynching laws to the margarine tax repealer.

The agreement for the Tuesday vote about emptied the chamber, although several dairy-State Senators continued to talk.

Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) appealed to five colleagues and almost empty galleries, to pass the substitute bill and restore "some semblance of competitive decency" to the breadspread business.

This substitute would repeal discriminatory taxes levied on margarine for 64 years. Instead, it would bar all yellow margarine from interstate commerce, thus keeping it out of the District of Columbia and about one third of the States where there are no margarine plants. The committee bill would repeal all margarine taxes but would require that margarine served in public eating places be molded into three-cornered patties.

If margarine should enjoy "unlimited and uncontrolled shipments," Hickenlooper shouted, "every field of dairy production would be subject to 'ersatz' treatment."

The Iowan displayed a paper carton of a product called "Whip-Topping" made in Buffalo. The label, he said, called it "Pure frozen soy cream for whipping."

"That's deception at the outset," he declared. "It is an attempt to sell it in place of cow's cream for whipping."

Its contents, he said, are "hydrogenated soya oil, water, soya protein, corn syrup, salt, artificial flavoring and artificial coloring, etc."

Hickenlooper was interrupted here by Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.) another butter supporter, who remarked that the label about soya oil and soya protein might deceive some consumers to think that "soya is a cow."

"It could mean to some that it is a variation of Guernsey or Jersey cream," Aiken said. Hickenlooper agreed.

Southwestern Bell Strike Seen in Offing

St. Louis, Jan. 13 (AP).—Union officials today formally served notice on Governors of the six States served by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. that they feel free to call a strike after midnight Sunday.

That date marks the end of a truce arranged by Gov. Forrest Smith of Missouri.

Division 20, CIO Communications Workers of America, made known its position in telegrams to each Governor.

Frank P. Lonergan, union vice president, said the telegrams do not necessarily mean the union's 50,000 workers would walk out at midnight Sunday. A strike date, he added, would not be revealed "beforehand."

The deadlock developed last Friday when the company turned down the union's demand for a 15-cent-an-hour wage increase. Fourteen other issues also are involved.

In addition to Missouri, Southwestern Bell serves Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Texas and a small section of Illinois.

Chrysler Workers Free To Strike After Jan. 25

Detroit, Jan. 13 (AP).—The CIO United Auto Workers said today it would "feel free" to call a strike of 89,000 Chrysler workers any time after January 25.

Norman Matthews, UAW Chrysler workers any time after January 25.

Norman Matthews, UAW Chrysler director, said the union would break off negotiations next Wednesday unless "satisfactory progress" has been made on pension talks. Under an agreement with the company, the union would be free to call a strike seven days after that.

Matthews added he would ask the company to continue talks through this weekend in an effort to meet the Wednesday deadline.

The union has been bargaining off and on with Chrysler since last July. The UAW is demanding a pension program similar to that won last fall at Ford Motor Co.

Witness Assails Housing Bill as 'Socialism'

By The Associated Press

A Senate witness yesterday denounced President Truman's new two-billion-dollar middle-income housing program as 'pure socialism" and clashed angrily with Democratic Senators who defended it.

The witness was Horace Russell, general counsel for the United States Savings and Loan League.

Testifying before a Senate Banking Subcommittee, Russell protested that he had been called "a liar" by Senator Sparkman (D., Ala.).

"I don't like being called a liar before a senatorial committee or anywhere else," Russel' told Sparkman, who was presiding.

Russell attacked the proposed legislation as both "uneconomic and unrealistic."

He said the measure would provide Treasury-backed loans running 50 to 60 years with interest as low as 2½ percent. Private building and home financing organizations could not meet such Government competition, he said, and as a result the taxpayer eventually would have to pay the cost.

The proposed bill, sponsored by Chairman Maybank (D., S. C.) of the Senate Banking Committee, would authorize more than two billion dollars in Federally guaranteed loans to persons in low-income groups to build homes through cooperatives.

"It is not only pure socialism to the extent of two billion dollars," Russell told the Senators, "but also the scheme is designed and intended to mislead."

Sparkman hotly objected to Russell's testimony as "unfair and not correct." He said Russell knew that Maybank and other Senators would not sponsor an attempt to "mislead the people down the road to socialism."

Russell retorted that Maybank and other Senators did not design or write the legislation.

Senators at Conference

But Sparkman insisted that whether they actually wrote it or not, he and Senators Tobey (R., N. H.), Flanders (R., Vt.), Ives (N. Y.) and others sat in on conferences that led to drafting the legislation.

"I'm saying I know where it came from," Sparkman told Russell. "I would not support it for one minute if it was intended to mislead or do the things you said it would do.

"Your statement is not correct and is unfair."

That brought Russell's protest against being called "a liar."

The witness said he formerly helped draft Government legislation, and had watched the creation of a long list of "temporary" Government agencies that quickly expanded into permanent bureaus.

Salesman's Show Fails; Barn Is Destroyed

Dillon, S. C., Jan. 13 (U.P.).—An embarrassed salesman faced the prospect today of buying farmer L. B. Rogers a new barn, after a demonstration of a fire-extinguisher bomb took a bad turn.

The salesman gathered farmers from miles around to see the new fire-fighting invention in operation. The bomb was suspended from a rafter of Rogers' barn and a fire of dry hay and tobacco built under it.

The fire got so hot it drove the spectators out of the building, but the explosion that was to spray smothering chemicals on it never came off.

Holober Convicted; Sentenced to Death

In D. C. Court

Letts Orders Christoffel Trial Jan. 30

Federal Judge F. Dickinson Letts yesterday ordered Harold Christoffel, ousted CIO official, to be tried January 30 for the second time on perjury charges.

The Government accuses Christoffel, former chief of a union local in the Milwaukee Allis-Chalmers plant, of lying in 1947 when he told the House Labor Committee he was not a Communist and had no Communist connections.

He was convicted in his first trial. The Supreme Court threw out this verdict, holding the trial judge had failed to make prosecutors prove a necessary quorum of the committee had been present when Christoffel testified.

Letts overruled Defense Attorney O. John Rogge's motions to have a renewed indictment quashed and to have the trial switched from Washington to Milwaukee. Rogge claimed Christoffel could not be given a fair trial here.

Letts also turned down Rogge's request that members of the House committee produce their personal or official diaries at a pretrial hearing, in order to determine whether they attended the hearing in question. But the judge ruled Rogge could inspect committee records and other official data to check on committee attendance.

Charles Francis Holober yesterday was found guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced to death in the electric chair on February 15 for the slaying of his wife.

The guilty verdict was handed down at 10:30 a. m. yesterday by an all-male jury which took the case Thursday at 2 p. m. and was locked up that night when it failed to reach a decision.

It was the first time since April, 1927, that the death penalty had been imposed in Fairfax County Circuit Court.

Buried Wife and Child

Holober, a former Washington jewelry clerk who lived at 1216 Shepherd st. nw., confessed to the murder shortly after it was discovered last year. He told police he shot his wife, Frances, and buried his 8-month-old daughter alive with her in a shallow grave near a nudist camp off Route 673 between Vale and Sunset Hill in Fairfax County on February 26.

Holober, who watched the jury intently as they filed back into the crowded courtroom yesterday, slumped forward and turned his eyes to the floor when Jury Foreman Floyd Brinkley of McLean, Va., announced:

"We find him guilty of murder in the first degree and his punishment shall be death."

Mother Sobs

Mrs. Isidore Holober, of the Shepherd street address, mother of the convicted murderer, broke into loud sobs when the verdict was announced.

Before Judge Paul Brown announced the execution date, he asked Holober if he had anything to say.

In a low voice, Holober said, "I thought that because of the fact that I had schizophrenia that it might be a mitigating circumstance."

"That question, Mr. Holober, was determined by the jury," said Judge Brown.

The jury returned to court at 9:05 a.m. after having been locked up in the George Mason Hotel, Alexandria, overnight, and told Judge Brown it had not been able to reach a verdict.

Holober Talks

Foreman Brinnley asked Judge Brown at that time whether transcripts of some parts of the testimony where available. Judge Brown said the testimony probably could be gotten, but that it would take time. Then the jury went back into its chambers to consider the case again.

While the jury deliberated, reporters questioned Holober through the iron door and grilled window of his cell. He calmly admitted:

"I've known myself that I've been schizophrenic for quite some time. One can sense these things." He added that if his had been an advanced case of schrizophrenia, he might not have recognized it, but that he could "to a lesser degree."

"Just Neglect"

Asked why he did not get treatment for his condition, Holober smiled, shrugged his shoulders and said, "Just neglect, that's all."

Holober told reporters he was "adjusted and resigned" to any sentence the jury might return Asked what he would do if he received a life commitment, he replied:

"I thought I might do some reading and studying, but I haven't quite made up my mind. I'll have to see what the penitentiary offers."

He said that he had been reading "magazines but no other literature" during the time he spent in the Fairfax Jail cell.

Evaluates Psychiatrists

In response to a question, Holober said that of the mental institutions, he would prefer to go to St. Elizabeths.

Speaking in a soft, calm voice, Holober told reporters that of the psychiatrists who had examined him, three had "hit me off pretty closely."

These three were Dr. Frank S. Caprio, a private practising psychiatrist, of 1835 I st. nw.; Dr. Benjamin Karpman, chief psychotherapist at St. Elizabeths Hospital and Dr. Margaret Ives, psychologist at St. Elizabeths. All three testified Holober was a schizophrenic and was insane at the time of the crime.

Murder Uncontested

Holober said he thought Dr. Joseph R. Blalock, superintendent of Southwestern State Hospital at Marion, Va., "handled me very haphazardly." Dr. Blalock had testified that Holober was sane.

The trial centered around Holober's mental condition at the time the crime was committed last February. The defense made no effort to contest evidence that Holober killed his wife.

Holober told reporters yesterday he thought the newspaper had handled their accounts of his case and trial "with considerable discretion. They haven't exaggerated."

While still ignorant of the jury's verdict, Holober, speaking through the grillwork of his cell door, said he was "perfectly satisfied" with the way his case had been handled, and added, "I don't know enough about the law to suggest any improvemetnts."

When sentence was pronounced, Holober was wearing the same green suit he had worn throughout the five-day trial. Within an hour after the trial ended, he was on his way to the Richmond State Penitentiary. Although Judge Brown set the execution date for next month, the jury itself, under Virginia law, decided what the penalty for the crime should be.

Before he left the Fairfax jail, Mrs. Isidore Holober, and Holober's brother, Edward, saw him briefly there.

"I thought all along it would be life or death," he told them. "Maybe it will be commuted to life."

His mother, her voice breaking, said, "With your education, your music, you didn't have to stay up in that dusty room. You could have been out in the world making a living." Speaking of the jurors, she said, "I hope . . . I pray to God . . . they'll have the same heartaches I've had . . . some of them."

"How can they execute an insane man?" she cried. "They are bigger murderers than he is."

FBI Probing Plot to Wreck Two Flyers

Chicago, Jan. 13 (AP).—The FBI today joined police and railroad detectives in investigating a carefully engineered attempt to wreck two flyers of the Chicago & North Western Railway.

The trains miraculously remained upright when they plowed into obstructions on the tracks last night. None of hundreds of passengers was injured.

Investigators found that hundreds of pounds of switch bars, pieces of rail and maintenance equipment had been heaped on parallel tracks on Chicago's North Side.

The North Western's Valley 400, with 170 passengers, plowed first into one of the piles. The big Diesel screeched to a halt when the obstructions punctured air tanks and emergency brakes automatically grabbed.

The track barely had been cleared when the Twin Cities 400, with 300 passengers, hit the other obstruction.

The metal had been placed so none touched both rails. Had the bars touched both, the contact automatically would have set block warning signals.

Silver Spring Police Charge 2 in Forgery

Silver Spring police yesterday charged a Linden (Md.) couple with forgery after their arrest Thursday night at their home.

The couple, Willie S. Betts, 29, and his wife, Lottie Mae, 25, admitted forging nad cashing six checks totaling $140, in Silver Spring last month, police said.

In written confessions, the pair stated Mrs. Betts signed the name of a Bureau of Standards physicist to the checks which her husband cashed, police said. Betts had taken a bank statement and canceled checks from a mailbox at the physicist's home earlier, the statement said.

Both are being held under $1000 bond for hearing Tuesday in Silver Spring Police Court.

U. N. Probing Charges FBI Tapped Wires

Lake Success, N. Y., Jan. 13 (AP). Secretary-General Trygve Lie revealed today that the United Nations is looking into defense charges made in the Gubitchev-Coplon pre-trial hearing that telephones of U. N. employes were tapped by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Lie told a news conference that so far "I have no knowledge that the U. N. phones were ever tapped."

Valentin A. Gubitchev is a Russian under suspension from his post as an architect for the U. N. headquarters in New York. He was suspended when he and Judith Coplon, an American, were arrested and charged with espionage.

One reporter asked Lie if he had ever heard "suspicious clicks" in his own phone indicating it was tapped.

"Not in this country," Lie said.

Harold Shapiro, Justic Department lawyer, with whom Miss Coplon admitted in her first trial she spent several nights in hotels was in court today but was not called to testify. He probably will testify Monday.

County Liquor Store Found Broken Into

The Montgomery County Liquor Dispensary at 6110 MacArthur blvd., Brookmont, was broken into early yesterday, but it could not immediately be determined if any stock was taken.

Discovery of the smashed-in front door was made by county police on a routine patrol about 5:15 a. m.

Liquor board officials were taking an inventory to ascertain if any liquor was stolen.

Hiss Witness Defends Estimate of Chambers

New York, Jan. 13 (NYHT)—Dr. Henry A. Murray, Harvard psychologist, testified today that if some of the incidents in the life of Whittaker Chambers were as described on cross-examination by Thomas F. Murphy, Assistant United States Attorney, they were even more serious indications of a "psychopathic personality" than the incidents he had considered on direct examination.

Dr. Murray refused to concede that any of the alterations in the assumed facts which Murphy suggested to him would have the effect of weakening his diagnosis. He was cross-examined for nearly four hours as a defense witness in the second perjury trial of Alger Hiss.

On direct testimony he had repeated and elaborated the diagnosis previously given by Dr. A. L. Binger, New York psychiatrist. Both said that Chambers was psychopathic but not insane. Chambers is the key prosecution witness who accused Hiss of giving State Department secrets to a Communist spy ring in 1938. Hiss was indicted when he denied the accusation.

Dr. Murray refused to accept any of Murphy's suggestions, and often refused to answer questions on the grounds that Murphy was "trying to make me say something I don't believe."

Even ridicule had no effect on Dr. Murray. Murphy began by trying to show that Dr. Murray was not quite normal himself by drawing attention to his idiosyncrasies.

"Would it be significant to you on examining a patient if you noticed that his mouth twitched, his eyes opened and closed frequently, he had excessive hand motions, gazed about, played with his watch chain, sniffed through his nose, and played with his glasses—would those be symptoms of some kind?"

Dr. Murray smiled broadly as he listened. Then he answered quickly: "No."

"They would have no significance, none whatever?" Murphy persisted.

"No," Dr. Murray answered calmly. Murphy pursued the point, and Dr. Murray said that such outward manifestations would have significance if they fitted in with other important signs of the patient's state of mind.

Murphy asked Dr. Murray if he would rule out abnormal sexuality as one of the symptoms exhibited by Chambers. Dr. Murray said he could not rule it out because of the poem "Tandaradei," but that he would not include it because that one poem was insufficient evidence. Murphy pressed the point further without success.

Murphy asked Dr. Murray if Chambers' record of lying was not somewhat mitigated by the fact that after telling the grand jury in October, 1948, that he had no evidence of espionage, he went back to the same grand jury in December, 1948, and said he did have such evidence, and produced it.

Dr. Murray said that would strengthen rather than weaken his conclusion that Chambers is a pathological liar. It is characteristic of such people, he said, that they tell their story bit by bit, adding to it as they go along. Dr. Murray said his conclusion was further reinforced by the fact that Chambers added still more details in the present trial.

Store Sales In 1950 Off To Poor Start

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington department store sales got off to a poor start this year. In the week ended January 7, local dollar volume was 19 percent less than in the same 1949 period.

The slump was common throughout the Fifth Reserve District and the nation, according to the Federal Reserve Board. Regionally, the first week's sales were down 21 percent and nationally they were off 25 percent.

The slump was attributed to two major factors. The first 1950 week contained only five shopping days, compared with six last year. Also, stores began 1949 with big clearance sales while post-Christmas clearances haven't been as numerous this year. Unseasonable warm weather was still another factor.

For the four weeks ended January 1, however, local store sales remained 6 percent above the same period last year. Regionally, there was a 3 percent increase and nationally there was no change.

NEW MANAGER: W. W. Morriss has been appointed manager of the G. C. Murphy Co. store at 810 7th st., nw. He succeeds H. V. Hiller who has been promoted to management of a Murphy store in York, Pa. Morriss started with the firm 14 years ago in Baltimore. Subsequently, he served as assistant manager and manager in several stores until he was elevated to assistant to the eastern divisional manager in 1948. For the past 18 months, he has served as manager in Stamford, Conn.

SALES AHEAD: R. M. Hardy, reelected president of the Nation-Wide Food Stores, Inc., said yesterday that the cooperative chain of 128 stores had a record sales year in 1949 with dollar volume 5 percent ahead of 1948. Samuel Rosenblum was reelected treasurer of the group. Both Hardy and Rosenblum were renamed for their fifteenth consecutive term. Benjamin Chasen was elected vice president, succeeding Sol Aronoff who has retired. Vernon Foote was reappointed secretary. Other members elected to the board are Samuel Chasen, Alfred J. Gibbons, Sol Farber, Stanley Golden, Clifford Berry, Russell Hardesty, Paul Watkins, David Rubin and Ernest Holland.

AT RECORD LEVEL: Sales of electric appliances, bolstered by television, are estimated to have totaled $41,600,000 in Washington last year. William G. Hills, managing director of the Electric Institute of Washington, said yesterday this was "about the same" as in 1948 which was the best 12 months in the local industry's history. Business is expected to continue good in the first six months this year, but the outlook for the last half "is not so well defined," Hills continued.

ODD LOTS: Members of the D. C. Association of Insurance Agents will hear Walter C. Feimster, jr., claims adjuster, at a meeting Monday in the Mayflower . . . Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., declared regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share, payable April 1 to stock of record March 3. Annual meeting of stockholders is scheduled for March 28 . . . A special dinner tonight in the Wardman Park Hotel will honor D. M. Paul, Washington district manager of the State Farm Insurance Cos., and 30 members of his staff. Event marks attainment of two million dollars of life insurance written in 1949 by this district.

EARNINGS: Armour & Co. reported net income of $6,900,244 for the last quarter of its fiscal year ended October 29, 1949, wiping out losses of the first three quarters. For the full fiscal year, net totaled $558,189 which compared with an adjusted net loss of $2,552,547 in the preceding fiscal year. Other earnings statements:

Store Sales In 1950 Off To Poor Start

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington department store sales got off to a poor start this year. In the week ended January 7, local dollar volume was 19 percent less than in the same 1949 period.

The slump was common throughout the Fifth Reserve District and the nation, according to the Federal Reserve Board. Regionally, the first week's sales were down 21 percent and nationally they were off 25 percent.

The slump was attributed to two major factors. The first 1950 week contained only five shopping days, compared with six last year. Also, stores began 1949 with big clearance sales while post-Christmas clearances haven't been as numerous this year. Unseasonable warm weather was still another factor.

For the four weeks ended January 1, however, local store sales remained 6 percent above the same period last year. Regionally, there was a 3 percent increase and nationally there was no change.

NEW MANAGER: W. W. Morriss has been appointed manager of the G. C. Murphy Co. store at 810 7th st., nw. He succeeds H. V. Hiller who has been promoted to management of a Murphy store in York, Pa. Morriss started with the firm 14 years ago in Baltimore. Subsequently, he served as assistant manager and manager in several stores until he was elevated to assistant to the eastern divisional manager in 1948. For the past 18 months, he has served as manager in Stamford, Conn.

SALES AHEAD: R. M. Hardy, reelected president of the Nation-Wide Food Stores, Inc., said yesterday that the cooperative chain of 128 stores had a record sales year in 1949 with dollar volume 5 percent ahead of 1948. Samuel Rosenblum was reelected treasurer of the group. Both Hardy and Rosenblum were renamed for their fifteenth consecutive term. Benjamin Chasen was elected vice president, succeeding Sol Aronoff who has retired. Vernon Foote was reappointed secretary. Other members elected to the board are Samuel Chasen, Alfred J. Gibbons, Sol Farber, Stanley Golden, Clifford Berry, Russell Hardesty, Paul Watkins, David Rubin and Ernest Holland.

AT RECORD LEVEL: Sales of electric appliances, bolstered by television, are estimated to have totaled $41,600,000 in Washington last year. William G. Hills, managing director of the Electric Institute of Washington, said yesterday this was "about the same" as in 1948 which was the best 12 months in the local industry's history. Business is expected to continue good in the first six months this year, but the outlook for the last half "is not so well defined," Hills continued.

ODD LOTS: Members of the D. C. Association of Insurance Agents will hear Walter C. Feimster, jr., claims adjuster, at a meeting Monday in the Mayflower . . . Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., declared regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share, payable April 1 to stock of record March 3. Annual meeting of stockholders is scheduled for March 28 . . . A special dinner tonight in the Wardman Park Hotel will honor D. M. Paul, Washington district manager of the State Farm Insurance Cos., and 38 members of his staff. Event marks attainment of two million dollars of life insurance written in 1949 by this district.

EARNINGS: Armour & Co. reported net income of $6,900,244 for the last quarter of its fiscal year ended October 29, 1949, wiping out losses of the first three quarters. For the full fiscal year, net totaled $558,189 which compared with an adjusted net loss of $2,552,547 in the preceding fiscal year. Other earnings statements:

Probers See Police Action on Holdup

8 inches tall, weighing about 160 pounds, and clad in dark overcoat and dark hat.

3. No personal description, but was driving dark four-door sedan, believed to be an Oldsmobile, which turned north on 1st st.

Two-Car Tour

The congressional tour operated in two cars. The Congressmen rode with Capt. Robert V. Bryant, chief of detectives, and Lieut. Edgar Scott, head of the Robbery Squad.

In a second tour were John Woog, investigator for the House committee, with Lieut. Otto P. Fuss and Detective Sergt. H. W. Xander, both of the Robbery Squad.

They set out from police headquarters about 7:45 p. m.

They cruised independently, but in the same general areas throughout the evening, passing through many sectors where crime is most frequent. A majority of their time was spent in the Second Precinct.

The two cruisers met at 10:45 p. m., and the Congressman told reporters they were going to call it an evening at that time.

Holdup Message Flashed

It was about 8:55 p. m. when the holdup message went over the radio. Investigator Woog's cruiser was driving east on Independent ave. sw., about 12th st.

Until that moment, it's greatest excitement of the evening had come when it turned into an alley near 7th and S sts. nw., caught a crap game in its headlights, and watched the group disappear. All that was found was a dying bonfire and half a pair of dice.

With the holdup call Woog's cruiser leaped ahead, its siren wailing, sped east to Maryland ave., cut north from that into 3d st. slicing a path through traffic, signals and stops signs to the holdup scene. It was there within five minutes.

The Congressmen's cruiser, starting from 7th and G sts. sw., worked north with siren silent, and reached the store a few minutes later.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, was also at the scene, and he talked briefly with Representatives Davis and Wadsworth.

The Congressmen went into the store.

They heard police plainclothesmen question Lipsky and members of his family briefly before the grocer's daughter, Mrs. Rosalie Goldman, persuaded her father, still shaken from his blow, to leave the store and rest.

As he walked into the store, Davis commented that the speedy convergence of police at the scene was "a very efficient operation." He said he was greatly impressed with the increased efficiency which two-way radio gives to police operations.

Among the areas covered by the special investigating tour were those known as centers of crime—Jim Black's and Mead's Courts, Freedman's and Congress Courts, and Glisk's Alley, all in the area immediately east of 7th st. and between L and S sts. nw.

The tour ranged into the Mount Pleasant area, then down toward Washington Circle, past 24th and I sts. nw., near the sites of two recent violent crimes, rape, and murder of 8-year-old Harrison Walker last October.

The investigators said they were not out last night to reach conclusions, but to get education in police methods and equipment.

Overall Inquiry

Representative Davis has emphasized throughout that the House inquiry is to cover all links in the chain of law enforcement, the police, courts, prosecutors, penal institutions, parole and probation setups.

Public hearings are to be held in the near future, but no date has been set.

Last night's tour marked the first time the members of the investigating committee went out for first hand information about law enforcement methods — extensive preliminary studies have been made by Committee Counsel Hyman I. Fischbach and by Investigator Woog.

15-Cent Fares

The bad news in Capital Transit's request for a 15-cent fare (13 1/3 cents with tokens) had been anticipated in the company's many predictions. The 10-cent-an-hour wage award by the arbitration board—totally unrelated to the company's ability to pay—made the demand for higher fares inevitable. Even though Capital Transit has put into effect many economies, reflected in employe discharges, an operating deficit looms. Unlike some previous instances, the facts here are obvious and should not require lengthy debate—though on principle we do not subscribe to the company's request that no hearings be held.

Capital Transit's real problem, of course, is declining patronage, and another fare increase is not calculated to help this situation. But more patronage is not the sole answer when operating costs continue to rise by such leaps as the arbitration award, which was really an irresponsible method of passing the burden on to the public. Even with the 15-cent rate the company would realize just 5¾ percent return—considerably less than the 7½ percent adjudged fair by the Public Utilities Commission.

If the increase is granted, Capital Transit will be under no less an obligation to develop additional sources of revenue. Cooperation with other agencies in attacking the parking problem through faster transportation is one approach that ought to be pushed further. More express bus service, which has been mentioned by the company, is an encouraging move in this respect, and the faster service should warrant premium fares.

Elimination of the weekly pass will come as the biggest blow in the Capital Transit request. It is apparent, however, that the low-rate pass is not consonant with the company's financial position. There is no place for loss-leaders in public utilities. Nor would there be any panacea in public ownership, which would be even more vulnerable to higher operating costs. We believe Washington is best served by strong and efficient private transit management. If private management is to be maintained, there seems no alternative but for the PUC to grant the increase without delay.

On Recognition

A recent issue of the Times of London contains a most illuminating essay on the legal basis of the British recognition of the Communist government of China. The author of the memorandum is Dr. Hersch Lauterpacht, Whewell professor of international law at Cambridge University.

What Professor Lauterpacht strives to show is that the British action concerning China is wholly in accord with the traditional policy of the United States. Until the end of the nineteenth century American policy held consistently to the principle that de facto governments, that is, governments resulting from a successful revolution, are also to be considered de jure, which is to say legitimate governments.

The great majority of authorities, says Professor Lauterpacht, support the doctrine that a de facto government which has obtained control of the greater part of the national territory, which is able to command the obedience of the inhabitants, and which gives some evidence of permanency of power, is entitled to recognition as a matter of right. This of course does not apply to cases where the legitimate government appears to have a reasonable prospect of putting down rebellion and of restoring its sovereignty. But, says the professor, quoting from one of his own works, to insist that a "lawful government holding out in one isolated fortress is entitled to continued recognition de jure" is to strain the principle beyond all reason.

There remains the question whether a revolutionary government can be considered de jure until it has obtained some manifestation of popular approval, as, for example, by plebiscite or election. In its imperial days Great Britain often used the absence of clear evidence of popular approval as a reason for withholding recognition. After the Spanish-American war the United States began to adopt a similar attitude toward revolutionary governments in certain Latin-American countries. The most notable example was President Wilson's policy toward the Huerta government of Mexico.

Still another question is whether recognition should be made conditional upon assurances by the revolutionary government that its obligations will be fulfilled. Since under international law governments are bound by the obligations of their predecessors, the question, says the professor, is disingenuous or meaningless. In the case of weaker states it can be made a pretext for exacting concessions; in the case of strong governments, the assurances are of no more value than the will to fulfill them.

Thus, concludes Professor Lauterpacht, the British recognition of China accords with "the principle and practice of enlightened nations, including that of our closest friend and ally"—meaning, of course, the United States. Here, it seems to us, the professor exaggerates. Certainly the automatic recognition of de facto governments was our "principle and practice." But the truth is that for a good many years we have been vacillating between this principle and the opposite principle of withholding or delaying recognition of governments that we deemed of immoral origin. And to this fumbling between pragmatic and idealistic diplomacy, it seems to us, some failures of American foreign policy can be traced.

Two Budgets

A budget comprising almost 20 cents of every dollar of the national income, as the current Federal budget does, raises new questions that are everybody's business. A beginning of understanding would be to realize that there are in actual fact two budgets. Both are in good standing. The more familiar is the "administrative" budget, the other is the "consolidated cash" budget.

The administrative budget meets the need for operating control of the Government's activities. It is an instrument of administrative control. For example, the administrative budget registers the sum of the public works to which the Government has committed itself, even though the full outlay for those public works is not being made currently. It thus provides a sort of brake against future commitments that the country cannot afford. The consolidated cash budget measures intake and outgo in the year that the transactions actually take place. This cash budget is called "consolidated" because it includes all transactions between Government and people, while excluding transactions between departments within the Government, as, for instance, RFC expenditures in the purchase of another Government agency's bonds.

This consolidated cash budget serves a different purpose from that of the administrative budget. That purpose is emphasized year by year in the reports of the Council of Economic Advisers. In the 1947 report, for instance, the advisers say:

> Cash receipts and expenditures rather than budgetary receipts and expenditures were chosen in order to give a better picture of the economic effect of the financial operations of the Government. (Italics ours.)

What the advisers meant was that a budget which shows the intake and outgo by the Government in the year that the transactions actually take place is the only kind of budget that can measure the impact of those transactions upon the national economy. And it is this impact that concerns the council in appraising the economic state of the Union.

Now the President is preparing his tax message as a follow-up of his budget message. Which budget should be his guide? The Committee on Economic Development argues in favor of the consolidated cash budget, because of the reasons that make it necessary for the Council of Economic Advisers to use it. It is a weighty argument. By reflecting actual cash receipts and expenditures of the Government, the cash budget provides an index of the Government contribution to inflation or deflation. If more money is paid out than is taken in, then the Government is helping inflation; and conversely. In the past the neglect to be guided by the cash concept has created bad situations. The short and sharp depression of 1937, for instance, was worsened because the Government was withdrawing billions under the new social security taxes. This was deflationary, but the depressing effect of the withdrawal was not offset in fiscal policy; indeed, the Government kept itself and the rest of the country, including reputable economists, in blinders. That was the penalty of being guided by an administrative budget which did not reflect the intake of social security taxes in the Government's revenue.

The President's budget message included several reforms recommended by the Hoover Commission and other authorities. It shows the administrative budget, and thus is a guide for long-run control. It shows also the consolidated cash budget, and the time seems to be ripe seriously to consider the use of this budget, as recommended by reputable tax authorities in addition to the CED, as a guide for the President's tax message.

Loyalty In The Navy

We hope Navy Secretary Matthews did not realize the full implications of his statement to the Senate Armed Services Committee that when subordinates disagree with their superiors they must expect to be moved "out of the chain of command." Such a policy applied in the Navy would make a mockery of the promise of no reprisals. Indeed, it would contradict Mr. Matthews' own expressed opposition to "censorship" of naval officers' testimony or "punishment" for contrary opinions.

Obviously Navy heads must be allowed some latitude in the choice of men who, they believe, will carry out their policies. Loyalty to superiors, however, does not imply mere subservience or intellectual dishonesty. It is perfectly possible to be loyal and still not agree 100 percent with every policy; constant adjustments of this sort are made in every business. It is the general support, and the absence of undercutting, that are important.

We have no sympathy with the fomenters of open rebellion or the crusaders of the Admiral Gallery school who insist that because they believe strongly they automatically are right. But there is a great deal of difference between a man who publicly denounces Navy policy and one who merely answers the questions of Congress when asked for his personal opinion. In reality Mr. Matthews' code would penalize Navy officers for telling the truth—a suppression which Congress would have a right to resent. This iron formula may be the way to get rigid discipline, but it also is the way to get a Navy of puppets.

Coal Dilemma

The monotony of a three-day work week in the coal mines has been varied by the walkout of some 70,000 miners whom Mr. Lewis has ordered back to work next week. If his "suggestion that they resume production" is complied with, it will be another demonstration of his power to dictate how much coal shall be produced and his versatility in devising new methods of demoralizing the industry.

We have given up trying to fathom the motives behind Mr. Lewis' shifting tactics. But, regardless of his aims, his policies are undermining the industry and have created an emergency that is actual, not merely a threat. As The Washington Post has pointed out before, invocation of the provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act would not settle the dispute between the UMW and the mine operators. At best it would force the men to resume full-time work for an 80-day period. Similarly, only temporary relief from the pressure of coal shortages would follow if the NLRB were to sustain charges of unfair labor practices brought against the union and secure a court order enjoining continuance of the three-day work week.

There is plainly need for a new approach to a permanent solution of the coal industry's problems. Existing laws can provide temporary relief from the pressure tactics of the UMW's head, but decisive methods are required to break his stranglehold on the industry. Protective legislation might take the form of subjecting unions to the prohibitions of the antitrust laws when they attempt to control production and thereby usurp managerial functions. That would have the negative value of curbing Mr. Lewis' powers of dictation, but it would be no insurance against excessive demands that raise coal prices, lead to countless strikes, and progressively weaken the competitive position of the industry. Unless the UMW changes its leadership and shows a willingness to cooperate with management in working out reasonable agreements, Congress will be faced with a problem that can only be solved by regulatory legislation of a sweeping character involving governmental controls over wages, coal prices and coal output.

Payroll Padding

A Congressman's wife who is obviously worth her salt takes us to task in a letter appearing elsewhere on this page for our reflections of a few days ago on congressional nepotism. We are not willing to acknowledge as "nonsense" our assertion that "if a Congressman hires his wife or his daughter as a secretary, her salary may be, in effect, an addition to his income; and sometimes, although certainly not always, she may be altogether unequal to the duties of her office."

Undoubtedly some wives are indispensable to their husbands as secretaries. It seems to us equally true, however, that some wives with no secretarial experience whatever are put on congressional payrolls to collect salaries they do not actually earn. A flat ban on nepotism (which we were careful to refrain from suggesting) would deprive some members of Congress of valued assistants. But application of reasonably flexible standards set by Congress itself (granting the inapplicability of a rigid CAF classification) strikes us as a necessary means of assuring the public that those to whom it pays salaries for work on Capitol Hill are qualified for their jobs. We have, of course, never intimated that there should be any inhibition on wives who help their husbands for love.

The affirmative suggestions in our correspondent's letter seem to us extremely apt and persuasive. The glance she suggests at the Congressional Directory's table of votes cast in the 1948 election discloses a number of districts in which fewer than 20,000 went to the polls—Representative John Rankin's, for example. Representative Carl Hinshaw's California district, by contrast, had more than 250,000 voters. We should think that an appropriation for clerk hire based upon population actually represented would make a good deal of sense. We quite agree with her view that fire should be concentrated on "the people who get paid for not working, whether maid, wife or widow." Indeed, we think a highly critical attitude should be taken by Congress toward any member who employs his widow, regardless of her competence.

RECONCILEMENT

Like one who quarrels with his love, and goes
From her apart, and of his wounding grieves;
Yet keeps remembering his lonely Rose,
Though pierced by thorns; and only half believes
In his own wrath; and finds himself betrayed
By all he thinks or does that makes them part;
And hates himself for all that he has said,
And turns, and wildly clasps her to his heart.

So, life, although you deal us woeful scars,
To you we must return . . . The outer night
Is deep, and chill and distant are the stars;
And there's no hand in ours, or any sight
Of beauty, till, ashamed of all our pain,
Homeward we turn, to clasp you once again.

"Congressional Payroll"

I think the January 5 editorial, "Congressional Payroll," misses the boat. The point is not what relatives are on a payroll, or what their qualifications are, but simply: Do they work?

It would be quite impossible to draw up any CAF classification for employment in a Congressman's office. The work includes, in addition to typing and shorthand, personal contact work of all sorts, speech work, reading and digesting publications, filing, phoning, lunching constituents and a general program of pest control. A wife, who has wide experience at a lot of these jobs on the home front, can be very helpful and well worth her salt—if she keeps regular hours. Then too there are a great many wives who were their husbands' secretaries before they married, and have become indispensable to them over the years.

It is of course nonsense to say that "if a Congressman hires his wife or his daughter as a secretary, her salary may be in effect an addition to his income." I, for instance, figure it costs me between $40 and $50 a week for the privilege of working (without pay) in my husband's office. It means maid service, extra clothes, lunches, probably other meals out, possibly apartment hotel life instead of less expensive housekeeping, etc.

Why not concentrate your fire on the people who get paid for not working, whether maid, wife or widow?

In the new Congressional Directory you will find listed the votes cast for all Congressmen in 1948. The total vote cast in our district, was over 170,000. This is more than the total votes cast for eight out of the nine Alabama districts, yet they receive clerk hire eight times as great as ours. Twelve Congressmen represent districts of over 200,000, not including Congressmen-at-large. On the other hand 64 represent less than 50,000 voters.

Why not agitate for an appropriation based on population, with a jump of a given amount for each 50,000 voters in the district? If everyone had approximately the amount of money he needed, and no more, he could of afford to pad the payroll but the big districts could have the big staffs they need.

"Teachable Moment"

When Miriam Sherwin (letter published January 10) uses the deplorable technique of quoting phrases out of their context in order to justify her own feelings against the Montgomery County school system and certain educators, some enlightenment is necessary.

"Experiential intercourse" can only mean the interchange or communication of ideas and experiences which occur between one pupil and another or a pupil and his teacher. The importance of such relationships lies in the resultant learnings and understandings.

The "teachable moment" is not merely a measurement of time plucked abstractly from eternity in which a child can learn a given fact. The "teachable moment" occurs at any time when certain factors are present, i. e. when a child's interest has been aroused, when he has the incentive to learn, when he is equipped with tools or skills to pursue the subject in which he is interested.

The readiness to absorb information, to do some rethinking about this information or to formulate certain opinions about it is not always present. However, when it is present, it is easily recognizable by many parents and teachers who have observed and worked with children.

Symphony Conductor

With the omniscience that is the hallmark of a music critic, Mr. Paul Hume dismisses the "silly idle prattle" about the "genius of Toscanini, Beecham, Monteux, Koussevitsky and Bruno Walter," no one of whom "was hailed in his thirties or even his forties" as an "unequivocal genius," thereby completely missing the point of the Howard Mitchell controversy.

Unlike Mr. Mitchell, Toscanini did not leap at one bound onto the La Scala podium. Like Walter, Furtwaengler and others, Toscanini first learned the conducting art in lesser posts.

So much we have learned in baseball, where we mature promising talent in the minor leagues before placing it in the fire of major league competition. Let our orchestra trustees profit by the example: baton wielding is no less intricate than swinging a bat. It is small comfort that guest-conductors Szell and Beecham expressed delight in our orchestra "under its present conductor." Would Mr. Hume expect a week-end guest to criticize the quarters and food furnished by his host?"

Conducting is a complex art, and Washington deserves a proven master, not a neophyte.

Segregated Schools

Discrimination and segregation is an evil that America can ill afford in the light of her future role as leader in a democratic world.

The separation of schools in the Capital is unfair to all our children, both white and Negro. It is more harmful to the white child; because, it does not prepare him to face conditions which he cannot escape in his future relations with the growing strength of the darker races of the world. Separation is the breeding ground of prejudice, intolerance and hate. If continued, the white child will be lulled into a false sense of superiority which he will find to his great disadvantage in this modern age.

Every father, every mother, every teacher, every official of city, State and Nation must take counsel of himself and face up to the problem which has abided with us far too long. We have gone along believing that time itself would cure the evil, without lifting a finger of disapproval.

To continue to condone and appease racial discrimination and segregation in our Nation's Capital is lending aid and comfort to the enemy and giving him the only weapon he needs to push us all into oblivion. Our greatest hope is in our children, all our children, white and Negro. Let them not weigh us in the balance of tomorrow and find us wanting.

Unknown Soldier

I am wondering if the people will have a voice in the proposed appropriation of one million dollars for a tomb for another unknown soldier?

I, for one, feel we need another tomb like a hole in the head. I imagine the military wants it. But will the rest of us be asked our opinion?

Formosa As A Proving Ground

President Truman's statement on Formosa is an interesting example of our national propensity to substitute windy moral generalizations for thought in foreign policy. Mr. Truman assures the world that the United States is not "predatory" as if we now stood before the bar of world opinion accused of war crimes in Asia. With his characteristic genius for oversimplification, the President poses the issue as imperialism on our part vs. international decency. If matters are as simple as that, what business did we have in Greece?

The alternative policy proposed by the Administration is to place diplomatic and monetary barriers athwart the logical Communist line of advance into the southeast Asian mainland. Chances of ultimate success seem most dim. Population is increasing rapidly throughout the area; erosion is accelerating; resources are static. Thus far, the Communists have effectively marshalled these forces of discontent.

For these and other reasons, the building of a monetary dike on the southeast Asian mainland seems foredoomed to failure. We lack time. We lack a program. By abandoning Formosa, we have shown realistic Asian politicians the extent to which they cannot rely on the United States in the event they resist communism and are defeated.

Within the island cordon, the situation is different. The water barrier stretches the time element in our favor. Naval and air protection for Formosa, the Philippines, Indonesia can be provided at a cost not disproportionate to the stake. Even here, on a long-range basis, Point Four programs will fail unless the United States cooperates with Asiatic governments in a vigorous attack on the cancer of unrestricted population growth.

What should we do in Formosa?

A million Chinese carpetbaggers now sit on the backs of the Formosan population. They have plundered the island, killed its native leaders, ravaged its industries. It is high time that they become guests and refugees. Our guiding aim should be Formosan self-government.

In the interim, U. N. control on a custodian basis should be instituted and during this interim democratic institutions should be fostered as swiftly as feasible. The outside aid needed is chiefly: (1) naval and air protection against invasion—not involving far-reaching commitments on our part; (2) engineering and managerial personnel to run the complex of hydro power, sugar, mining, etc., which the Japanese administered so expertly until we foolishly deported them.

Formosa could be a proving ground. On this island, the West might show the Chinese people how decent conditions of life for the Asiatic masses can be created. One suspects that this comparison would speak for itself and that Formosa might become a silent rallying ground for the anti-Communist sentiment of China.

Protection of Formosa is compatible with immediate recognition of the Chinese Communist government. The latter should be recognized simply because it governs. It was never intended that the U. N. become a club of ci-devant politicians whose governments are inside their hats. N. W.

How To Win An Election

Policy Statement

Scene—A meeting of the Association for Advancement.

Chairman—We have met as interested citizens to make recommendations for the new Republican policy statement for 1950.

Mr. Dare—Mr. Chairman! As president of Atomic Age Citizens, Inc., I demand that we urge the Republican policy commitee to throw a bomb into politics—draw up a statement that says something.

Mr. Stalactite—Just a minute, sir! The thing's never been done!

Mr. Dare—But this is the age of change — of Einstein. Why, matter's going into energy so fast we can't keep up with it—

Mr. Wadd (thunderously)—Then why don't we stop it! Why are we sitting here?

Mr. Stalactite—It's what comes of letting Lilienthal run things!

Mr. Bray—Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Mastodon—I protest this man Bray's speaking. He's a Democrat!

Mr. Bray—I'm here in a non—I mean bipartisan role.

Mr. Mastodon — There's no such thing!

Mr. Banal—We don't want any so-called liberals mixed up in this.

Mr. Brash—But as a Republican, I say our party's got to take a liberal stand.

Mr. Wadd—Where's the money coming from?

MR. TRUMPET—Mr. Chairman, to save time—I mean to expedite transactions—I've drawn up a statement of policy essentials that we can get out of the way without controversy. I propose that the Republicans come out flatfootedly for the American way of life, that they forthrightly denounce statism, and unequivocally take a stand for economy and efficiency in government—

Mr. Banal—There's nothing there about denouncing "isms" or do-gooders.

Mr. Mastodon — Or about sanity in government and America for Americans.

Mr. Stalactite — Nor about sending milk to Hottentots.

Mr. Brash—Mr. Chairman, as I understand it, my party is committed to a definite and concise statement of aims.

Mr. Wadd—Where's the money for such things coming from?

Mrs. March—Something should be put in that policy statement to appeal to women voters.

Mr. Brash—One of our Senators has proposed pensions for the 40 million housewives of the Nation.

Mr. Bray—What this country needs is pensions for everybody!

Mr. Mastodon—I again object to Mr. Bray's speaking.

Mr. Bray—I'm just giving the Republicans some help as a bipartisan. They've got to promise something—say a television set in every home.

Mr. Stalactite—People might get a lot of wrong ideas in their heads.

MR. TRUMPET — Let's get back to the women. Their vote is important.

Mr. Brash—I have it! Take a stand for a woman Veep!

Mr. Mastodon — Wait! That's going too fast. Where would they find a qualified woman?

Mr. Trumpet — Here's the answer! Suggest the Republicans come out flatfootedly for an advisory woman Vice President.

Mr. Mastodon — "Adviser" is too strong a word. Better make it "consultant."

Mrs. McAddle — Who would she consult?

Chairman (rapping) — Order, please!

Mr. Dare—We should call on the Republicans to take a definite, courageous stand on the great issues of the day—the prevention of war, depression—

Mr. Wadd—Where's the money coming from?

Mr. Brash—And on the farm problem.

Mr. Banal—I have it! The Republican Party is for "continued responsiveness to the farm problem."

Mr. Brash—It should be more forward looking—say, come out for the chicken of tomorrow—the one's that's going to weigh 4 or 5 pounds at 12 weeks of age.

Mr. Stalactite — What's the matter with the chicken of yesterday? That's the kind I was raised on.

Mr. Dare—Is that any argument?

Mr. Trumpet—Here's a suggestion on labor. "The party is for vigilant and constant endeavor on behalf of the working man's welfare"—

Mr. Wadd—I object to that word "welfare!"

Mr. Stalactite — I object to limiting it to working men.

Mr. Banal — Let's make it "vigilant and constant endeavor on behalf of both the people at large and general public."

Mr. Bray—That's swell! That would do for anybody, even Democrats!

Equal Punishment

Our country's watchword, "Equality Before the Law," logically implies equal punishment for similar crimes. Time in jail is considered an equal hardship regardless of economic or social position. But fines set by law are not equal punishment for men of different incomes. While a $10 fine may be a hardship for one, it could be insignificant to another. To equalize fines they should be determined by "day's pay" rather than specific number of dollars. J. H. f.

RFC Loan Powers

By Marquis Childs

How To Aid Small Business?

SENATOR J. William Fulbright of Arkansas intends shortly to start a new series of hearings into the operation of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. Fulbright suspects that the big Government corporation, which began at the bottom of the depression by bailing out railroads in distress, is allowing its loan policy to be influenced by politics.

Childs

This new inquiry will take on added importance in the light of President Truman's request in his budget message for a considerable expansion in the powers of the RFC. It would become an important instrument in carrying out the Administration's declared intention of assisting small and middle-size business.

Specifically, the President asked for a "substantial increase" in the time limit on loans. Under present law the maturity date cannot be more than 10 years. This is said to put a handicap on smaller businesses that need long-term capital and cannot obtain it from private banking institutions. The President also recommended "an addition to the funds available for business loans."

THE FORTHCOMING investigation also coincides with a decision taken belatedly by the RFC. It has turned down a request for still another loan from the Lustron Corp.

Lustron, manufacturing prefabricated houses, had asked for an additional three million dollars to five million dollars in connection with a plan of reorganization that the RFC did not agree to. The decision was taken because the directors of RFC were not convinced that the company could operate profitably.

But this comes after RFC has already advanced $37,500,000 to Lustron. The loans to Lustron have frequently been criticized with the charge that political influence played a part.

A former chairman of the RFC, John D. Goodloe, testified that Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman wrote a letter requesting that the loan be made. This was shortly before the RFC took action. Lustron hired several former Congressmen and others who were believed to have power in the Washington influence market.

RFC directors explain that the Lustron loan was initiated under the War Powers Act in connection with the war and postwar housing shortage. They say that such a loan would not be possible under present law.

Nevertheless this seems to me an excellent illustration of the perils and difficulties that clutter the road of good intentions. Lustron originally had the backing of men who were deeply and sincerely interested in breaking the housing bottleneck. The company proposed a new technique for the mass production of prefab houses.

BUT AFTER many months of experimentation and $37,500,000 of Government money, it has not yet proved a practical or a profitable operation. The company never came close to its goal of 100 houses a day. An RFC director testifying last June said the company was making 15 houses a day and losing approximafely a million dollars a month. A little later Lustron was granted a final loan of two million dollars.

The ever-increasing growth of a few companies that tend more and more to dominate in industry after industry is a fact no one can afford to ignore. This is the negation of private enterprise and competition about which we hear so much political oratory. By the giant corporation, by the negotiated price, by a variety of trade agreements written into State and even Federal law, the area of competition has been greatly narrowed.

When it comes, however, to finding a corrective, the difficulties begin. Certainly, it is not by any magic of words that repeatedly intone the virtues of small business. Nor is there any magic inherent in the Government lending power in itself.

One of the RFC loans of which Senator Fulbright has been critical is that to the Kaiser-Frazer Corp. for 44 million dollars. The money was advanced in part to further Henry Kaiser's project for bringing out a car in a lower-price range than any on the market today. But Fulbright felt that his committee should have been consulted before so sizable a loan was granted.

Government intervention is essential, both on the negative side of antitrust action and on the positive side of aid to smaller business, if the surviving area of competition is to be saved. But it is important to get some definition and clarification, and congressional hearings should contribute to that end. Aid to business must be on a realistic basis or suffer discredit and defeat.

at present "the Chinese are not aiming toward dictatorship. Their revolution is not Russian in essence, but is subject to perversion."

"The upheaval in Asia is a revolution which, if we analyze it," Rusk declared, "we will see is prompted by the same things that prompted the British, French and American revolutions."

Rusk's address appeared to indicate that the State Department, which asked that the regional World Affairs Council be held, chose the gathering to amplify United States policy on China.

Rusk's speech made it clear that United States policy is based upon the hope that even Communist movements can be kept out of Soviet control, and indicated that so long as Nationalist movements —Communist or otherwise—are not Soviet controlled the United States may deal with them.

Rusk declared European integration to be the main problem in the Western Hemisphere. Prevention of World War III, he said, hinges on whether the USSR and all other nations can be persuaded to accept a "minimum standard of conduct."

whether a Nationalist or a Communist spokesman should represent China.

But he again dodged questions on the military importance of Formosa or on other military subjects which, he said, were properly within the province of the defense establishment. When Johnson and Bradley appear, on a date still to be determined, the same questions will be asked of them.

On the Senate floor three Republicans — Alexander Wiley (Wis.), Styles Bridges (N. H.) and Owen Brewster (Maine)—added their voices yesterday to the appeals for active American help to the Nationalists on Formosa.

Wiley, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he favored "sending our brains, especially our military brains," to the island. Bridges, ranking Republican member of the Appropriations Committee, called for a resolution of "censure" and asked that the United States give the Nationalists on Formosa whatever help they need to survive.

He had before him a report by C. B. Marshall, a staff expert of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, estimating that the Nationalists on Formosa might be able to hold out for six to 18 months without American help. Marshall, a former Harvard instructor, wrote that in a future war enemy control of Formosa would be of "great strategic consequence."

Connally jumped into the argument, as he did last week, to ask whether Bridges was "in favor of sending an American army to China now to oust the Communists."

"As of today I'm not in favor," Bridges answered, although he repeated his call for other forms of aid. Connally's retort was that the Republican critics "haven't got the nerve and courage to vote their convictions—if those are their convictions."

The House committee made its report public yesterday, and Republican members expect to use it as a basis for questioning Acheson when he returns next week to finish his previous testimony.

with people to create a demand for knowledge."

Asked by Representative Lodge (R., Conn.) if he thought "Truman-Acheson policy in the Far East conducive to private investment, Hoffman hesitated. Then he said, "I'd like to duck that one."

Replying to a question by Representative Judd (R., Minn.), the ECA boss declared the only resistance by Chinese civilians to the Communist attack was in areas which had received "some help" under ECA. He added that if such a program had been in effect in China for five years "the Communists wouldn't be there today."

Stress Free Labor

Donald Montgomery, Washington director of the United Auto Workers, CIO, said the CIO favored the bill introduced by Chairman Kee (D., W. Va.) of the committee, now under consideration, but would oppose another introduced by Representative Herter (R., Mass.). He recommended that the bill contain guarantees that labor would be free to bargain collectively in countries receiving technical aid under its provisions.

The CIO opposed the Herter bill, Montgomery said, because it gave no guarantees to countries receiving assistance while requiring guarantees from them. He said the CIO also objected to exclusive administration by the United States rather than through the United Nations.

Rules Group Seeks Powers

law after Speaker Rayburn and Majority Leader John W. McCormack (Mass.) personally got behind it.

In a radio speech last night, Eberharter predicted the House will reverse the Rules Committee and uphold the 21-day discharge rule.

The only Northern Democrat voting with the coalition was Representative James J. Delaney (N. Y.), who generally goes along with the Administration. Another Northern Democrat, Representative John McSweeney (Ohio) was absent.

Delaney told newsmen his vote was not aimed at FEPC but at "deficit spending."

Sees 10-Billion Deficit

"If we do not abolish the 21-day rule, the deficit will be close to 10 billion," he argued.

Committee Republicans used much the same argument but most of them have previously balked at going on record on FEPC. Southern members to a man opposed FEPC but timed their move to the economy uproar.

Here are the nine members who voted for repeal of the reform rule:

Cox, Delaney, Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), William M. Colmer (D., Miss.), John E. Lyle, jr. (D., Tex.), Leo E. Allen (R., Ill.), Clarence J. Brown (R., Ohio), James W. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.), Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.).

Angered by the upset, Chairman Sabath told newsmen: "I will never again vote in committee for anything that coalition offers."

Fair Deal Plans in Danger

The House test will hinge on whether Republicans vote as a body with Southern and anti-Administration Democrats. There was no coalition of the two factions when the House last session approved the 21-day rule, 275 to 142.

If the committee is upheld by the House, not only civil rights legislation but the entire Fair Deal program will be pretty much at the mercy of the Rules group. It would take 218 signatures on the old type of discharge petition to override the committee and force a bill to the floor.

The rules upset came in closed session after the committee had spent more than two hours listening to Representative Lesinski and Representative Adam C. Powell, jr. (D., N. Y.) argue for approval of the FEPC bill.

Foes To Be Heard Monday

Representative John Rankin (D., Miss.) appeared to testify against the bill, but Sabath told him and other opponents to come back Monday for continued hearings.

In the long wrangle over FEPC, Representative Smith called the bill "the camel's nose under the tent," and Representative Allen termed it "strictly political." Cox said the bill's purpose is to "protect the alien in the North rather than the Negro in the South."

Powell, chief author of the bill, was conciliatory. He said the bill's purpose was to provide economic opportunity rather than social. Arguing that antidiscrimination statutes have worked well in New York and nine other States, he even proposed a "Southern gentleman" be put in charge of the proposed Federal agency.

After continuing FEPC hearings until next Monday, Sabath called up two of the less-controversial bills on the leadership slate and took testimony on them. These would (1) increase appropriations for United States participation in international organizations and (2) iron out inequities in retirement benefits and widow annuities of Government workers retired before 1948.

counsel for the Treasury Department, he said, and assisted in drafting the joint resolution for the Twenty-first Amendment for both Judiciary Committees.

Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) told Hester he would ask the committee's attorneys to give their opinion.

Senator Warren G. Magnuson (D., Wash.), who was chairman of the judiciary committee of the Washington State Senate in 1933, agreed with Hester. He said his State considered that the Twenty-first Amendment returned all control over liquor and advertising to the States.

Another attack upon the legality of the Langer proposal was made by John E. O'Neill, Washington lawyer for the Small Brewers Association. O'Neill said the bill is "an attempt to circumvent the Twenty-first Amendment, and to usurp the police powers of the States to regulate the traffic in alcoholic beverages within State borders."

Yesterday was the liquor and beer men's day before the committee. More than 40 witnesses, representing labor, lawyers, brewers, distillers, etc., appeared.

One, Brewer Karl L. Gretz of Philadelphia, got a laugh when he referred to the number of ministers among the 500 dry workers that overflowed the Senate caucus room.

"We ask that this bill," he said, "be finally disposed of by interment without benefit of clergy."

Canada Drops Threat Against Colonial Line

Ottawa, Jan. 13 (AP).—Canada's air transport board today removed its threat to suspend the license of Colonial Air Lines of New York which has challenged the validity of a Canada-United States air transport pact.

At the same time, the two governments announced agreement to refrain from further implementation of the pact until the United States Supreme Court rules on Colonial's charges. The case opens in Washington February 17.

Colonial will continue to operate exclusively on the disputed Montreal-New York air route, without the proposed competition of Trans-Canada Air Lines, until the court brings down a ruling. This is not expected until at least March.

Rising Income

By Mark Sullivan

Doubt Cast on Truman's Formula

PRESIDENT Truman's three messages to Congress—budget, economic report and State of the Union—come down to a projected five-year plan for the country's economy. The plan includes three outstanding features.

Sullivan

One feature is, no reduction of the Government debt at this time; on the contrary, increase of it. Another feature is a program of several "welfare" projects, most of them costly—national health insurance, aid to education, public housing, public power projects, increase of Social Security and extension of its benefits to large groups not now covered.

The third feature of the projected economic plan is increase of the national income, in Mr. Truman's words "the total of all the income received by all the people in the United States." This is the cornerstone of the plan for the future. The obvious expectation is that out of the increased national income, the Government can take enough, in taxes or otherwise, to pay the immense cost of the welfare projects which Mr. Truman proposes. The new economic plan must stand or fall upon whether the projected increase of national income can be brought about. Decidedly, this projected increase needs to be examined.

THE PROJECTED increase is to be some 40 billion dollars, on top of a present figure of some 260 billion, to be brought about during the next five years. This increase in national income, Mr. Truman says, "would be equal to an average increase of nearly $1000 for every family in the United States." On an earlier occasion, in an informal speech last September, Mr. Truman, speaking of a somewhat longer period than five years, described the increase of incomes for families thus: "We can establish an income level . . . of $4000 per family a year." Confidently, Mr. Truman said, "This is not a pipe dream." He added that a quarter of the population who now receive less than $2000 a year would receive $4000.

How is the projected increase of national income to come about? Some increase, though hardly the amount Mr. Truman projects, can take place soundly through natural processes. One natural process is increase in the number of persons that work. If in any year the number of persons coming to working age exceeds the number who die or become old and retire, this excess would be a sound and natural increase of national income, it would be an increase in terms of more goods. But during the coming five years, increase of national income from this source can hardly be great, for the number of workers in the country is already close to the maximum.

Another sound increase in national income can come through improved methods of production—mechanical improvements in industry; in agriculture, use of new and better machinery, better seeds, better methods of cultivation. This kind of increase goes on at all times. It is a true increase, it produces more goods, but the quantity of this kind of true increase, even when added to the true increase brought by a larger number of workers, can hardly be expected to produce the some 40-billion-dollar increase which Mr. Truman projects for the next five years.

THERE IS another way of increasing national income, at least in figures. To workers getting $2000 a year, give or decree a wage of $4000 a year. The $2000 increase in individual income, multiplied for many million workers, makes an impressive increase in national income, in figures though not in goods.

This way of increasing national income has been practiced on a large scale during the Truman Administration. The Administration in 1945 announced a policy of wage raises, and these have been going on upon an immense scale, many through direct action of the Administration or with its encouragement. In figures, this accounted for much of the increase in national income that has already taken place. The increases in wages were followed by increases in the prices of manufactured goods, and this was another contribution to the increase in figures of national income. Yet another contribution consisted of Government policies through which farmers received for many crops roughly double the prices they had previously received.

So far as the presently projected increase of national income during the coming five-years does not take place by natural processes which increase the quantity of goods, and so far as it may be brought about artificially by mere raises in the figures of wages and prices, to that extent the result will be more of what we have already had, more inflation, continued increase in the national debt. The projected five-year-plan may become a mere statistical Shangri-la, fools' gold at the end of the rainbow.

Statistics Used In Coal Dispute

thta on January 1 retailers had a four-days' supply of coal on hand, as against an average five-days' supply on December 1. Officials said that the retailers have had lower coal stocks in the past and, that during the past heating season, an increasing amount of coal was going directly from small truck mines to the home consumers.

Local shortages of coal, the department said, were due not to the over-all lack of coal, but to faulty distribution.

The United States Chamber of Commerce also joined the statistical affray yesterday with its own sampling survey of the retail coal situation, and found that rretailers had less than seven days' supply.

"Shutdown of many school systems is reported imminent," the Chamber said. "Hospitals and other institutions face alarming shortages in some places. A state of emergency has already been proclaimed in some areas. Rationing is being employed at some points and is planned for others unless there is immediate relief."

(Dimouts at Illinois welfare institutions were ordered yesterday because of dwindling coal reserves.)

A majority of the coal dealers reported it will be next to impossible to supply home needs even though the mine work week of five days is restored at once, according to the C. of C. survey.

The National Coal Association offered new statistics in support of its declaration that there is a national coal emergency.

The NCA says that on January 1, 1949, the Nation had an above-ground coal stockpile of 70 million tons, and produced during the ensuing year 435 million tons. During the same year, 1949, a total of 471 million tons of coal were disposed of, leaving a stockpile of 34 million tons on January 1, 1950.

More statistics can be expected, in the near future, when the Senate Labor Committee holds hearings on a GOP-sponsored resolution declaring that there is indeed a national emergency and that the President ought to invoke the Taft-Hartley Act. The committee yesterday agreed to take up the resolution at a date to be set.

Filipinos Deny Misuse of U. S. Aid for Isles

Manila, Jan. 13 (AP).—Filipinos reacted angrily today to Secretary of State Acheson's statement the Philippines government was responsible for misuse of some two billion dollars spent here by the United States since the end of the Pacific war.

Ailing President Elpidio Quirino in a Baltimore hospital led the reaction. He radioed a statement saying:

"I deplore insinuation that the Philippines may be a second China. The Philippines government has done what has been humanly possible to utilize every dollar spent by the United States on the Philippines for reconstruction and rehabilitation."

The Filipinos interpreted Acheson's statement to mean a comparison of conditions in the Philippines with those in China under the Nationalist regime where large sums of American money were dissipated through graft and corruption.

President Quirino's reaction was mild compared to a news statement issued by Finance Secretary Pio Pedrosa. He accused the United States of unwisely handling its disbursements of aid to the Philippines and strongly hinted that Americans participated in graft in the disposition of surplus property.

Pedrosa said there was some "graft and fraud" in the disposition of surplus property with a supposed inventory value of 900 million dollars. He admitted the government recovered only 14 million dollars from sales of the surplus goods.

"I want to say that graft did not begin only after the surplus property was transferred to the Philippines government," Pedrosa concluded.

Russians Aid Invasion Plan, China Charges

Taipei, Formosa, Jan. 13 (AP).—Chinese Nationalists charged tonight that Russian advisers are aiding Communist preparations for an invasion of the Chusan Islands, important Nationalist airbase.

The islands lie 100 miles south of Shanghai. The nearest are 7 miles from the mainland. The main island has a Nationalist airfield from which increasingly heavy raids have been made on Shanghai and other Red holdings.

The Nationalists say the harbor of Hangchow, on the mainland west of the Chusans, is crowded with some 2000 junks assembled for invasion. Nationalists said the fleet was heavily attacked during the day by B-25s. The entire mainland coast opposite the islands also was reported bombed. Six locomotives and a bridge were reported destroyed.

In anticipation of an eventual Communist move against Formosa, the government disclosed it expects to conscript 35,000 Formosans by the end of May. Parades today coincided with Mme. Chiang Kai-shek's arrival from the United States. people of all ages marched, waving paper Nationalist flags. Chiang Kai-shek met her and his elder son, Gen. Chiang Ching-kuo, on their arrival.

Russians Reported Seeking China Bases

London, Jan. 13 (AP).—Russia is dickering for new naval and military bases in Communist China, a qualified informant reported tonight.

Officials of two western powers said there is good reason to believe a defense, trade and friendship pact between Russia and Communist China is on its way.

British Nations Map Aid to Asia

Colombo, Ceylon, Jan. 13 (NYHT).—The Australian plan for Commonwealth economic cooperation, which eventually may revolutionize relationships of Commonwealth nations with each other and with Asia, was unanimously approved today in principle at the Commonwealth conference.

The plan, the only large-scale specific contribution to the discussions, is based on the concept that the only way to resist communism in Asia is to eliminate poverty of the masses, which might lead them to look to Russian solutions.

All Ministers agreed to recommend the Australian plan to their governments.

Primary needs in Southeast Asia, according to the Australians, are goods sufficient to maintain the standard of living and to give incentive to the peoples of Asia; technical advice and assistance from Westernized Nations; capital equipment; and sterling credits.

J. Gelleff

Woman Volunteer Organist 65 Years

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

Ever since 1885, Mrs. Griffith Lewis Johnson, now a sprightly gray-haired woman who admits she "never will see 75 again," has been playing the organ at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette sq.

Mrs. Johnson, who had her first organ lesson at four, and has been playing publicly since she was 10, said she never has been official organist at any church, though she was twice offered the job at St. John's.

"I'm simply a volunteer," she said. "I do the utility playing the church organist is not employed to do. I play only at the rector's request, and I play to suit myself," she declared.

At Noonday Services

Mrs. Johnson has played for every rector of St. John's since 1881, and currently plays at noonday services on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, and at the weekly French service at 4 p.m. Sunday.

Born in Norfolk, Va., Mrs. Johnson learned the organ from her mother "as soon as I could sit in a chair." Her mother, the only regular teacher she ever had, studied the instrument with a former organist from the Vatican, then in the United States.

Later Mrs. Johnson studied harmony, theory and composition for three years at the University of Pennsylvania, and was coached by a French organ master. At Suffolk Cathedral in England she studied direction of boy choirs.

Came Here In 1881

Her family came to Washington in 1881, arriving on the July day when President Garfield was assassinated in the Baltimore & Potomac Depot in Washington. Mary, then about 9 years old was furious when she and her family were let out in the "sticks" instead of the regular station.

When a policeman explained that the station was closed because an assassin had shot the President, she turned to her father and demanded "why didn't he wait until we got here!"

In 1893 Mrs. Johnson played at the Chicago World's Fair, the only American-born, American-trained organist to appear on the program. For this she received a bronze medal designed by August Saint Gaudens, famed sculptor.

In Many Churches

During her 69 years in Washington Mrs. Johnson has played in almost every church in the city, filling in when the regular organist was absent. Most of her work, however, has been at St. John's Church, of which she has been a member since coming to the city.

Her husband, a court reporter at the Capitol, died in 1931. She lives at 1730 16th st. nw.

Mrs. Johnson insists she is "not a professional musician." As for teaching, "I never taught anybody in my life and I wouldn't teach for anything in the world," she said.

When asked for a picture, Mrs. Johnson said a lady had her picture in the paper on only three occasions—her debut, her marriage, and her funeral.

"Two of these occasions are past," she said, "and I'm not ready for my funeral."

Annual Red Mass Scheduled Sunday

The Right Rev. John K. Cartwright, rector of St. Matthew's Cathedral, will give the sermon at the annual Red Mass at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University, at 11 a. m. Sunday.

Members of the judiciary, the diplomatic corps and Congress are expected to attend the mass, which marks the resumption of work by Congress and the Courts. The term Red Mass was adopted for the service because the petition of the mass seeks the aid of the Holy Spirit, symbolized by the flaming fire of divine love and wisdom.

Celebrant will be the Rev. Dr. William J. Lallou, associate professor of theology in the school of sacred theology.

Pruden to Reply To Pope's Appeal

The Rev. Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of First Baptist Church, 16th and O sts. nw., will speak on "My Response to the Pope's Invitation" at 9:45 and 11 a. m. Sunday.

He has subtitled the sermon "A Sincere Attempt to Give a Brotherly Answer to an Invitation Sincerely Extended." Dr. Pruden said that he has "no intention of making an attack upon the Catholic church but rather to organize and state briefly the basic reasons why many non-Catholics feel they cannot accept the invitation which the pope extended just prior to Christmas."

In his message, Pope Pius XII called for "the great return to the one true church, awaited over the centuries, of so many who believing in Jesus Christ and are for various reasons separated from her."

District Baha'i to Mark World Religion Day

Baha'is of Washington will mark world religion day at 4 p. m. Sunday, with a program on the "Universality of Faith" at the Baha'i Center, 1308 I st. nw.

Speaker at the meeting will include the Rev. Dr. John Sylvester Smith of Washington College, Chestertown, Md., and Dr. Stanwood Cobb of the Chevy Chase Country Day School.

Dr. Cranford to Preach At Interfaith Service

The Rev. Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, will preach a sermon based on a Heywood Broun short story at 4 p. m. Sunday in Vermont Avenue Baptist Church, 1630 Vermont ave. nw.

The interdenominational, interfaith service will be sponsored by the Interchurch Fellowship of Washington.

Prayer Asked By Catholics For Converts

Prayers for the conversion of the world to Roman Catholicism will be offered during the annual Chair of Unity Octave, January 18-25.

In a letter to Catholics in the Archdiocese of Washington, the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, archbishop, urged prayer and works of charity "to the end that sincere and fervent followers of Our Lord may find their way back to that abode of peace and strength which is to be found only in the universal unity of the true fold of Jesus Christ."

The letter, printed in yesterday's edition of the Catholic Review, official newspaper of the archdiocese, pointed out that Pope Pius XII "made the reunion of all Christians under the leadership of the Vicar of Christ one of the major objectives of the Holy Year."

In Washington, a series of special services will be held each night at 8 during the octave at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University.

In addition, there will be special radio broadcasts over station WMAL at 7 p. m. today, over WINX at 5:30 p. m. Sunday, Monday at 7 p. m. and 8 p. m. on on WWDC.

Intentions of the eight days are: January 18, return of the "other sheep" to the one fold of Christ; January 19, return of the Oriental Christians; January 20, submission of the Anglicans; January 21, that the Lutherans and other Protestants of continental Europe may find their way back to the Holy Church; January 22, that Christians in America may become one in union with the chair of St. Peter; January 23, return to the sacraments of lapsed Catholics; January 24, conversion of the Jews; and January 25, missionary conquest of the world for Christ.

Large Soap, Clothing Collections Made Here

More than 118,000 pounds of clothing and 70,400 bars of soap were collected in the Archdiocese of Washington during the Thanksgiving clothing and soap drive.

The Rev. E. Jerome Winter, archdiocesan director of the drive, said that financial contributions from parishes will make it possible to purchase an additional 75,000 bars of soap. The drive, held November 20-27, was sponsored nationally by the War Relief Services, National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Members of the adult class at Universalist National Memorial Church will hear a discussion of "The Religious Philosophy of Charlotte Bronte" at 10 a.m. at the church, 1810 16th st. nw. Lewis E. Warren, the speaker, will discuss the novels "Jane Eyre" and "Shirley."

Rev. P. G. Amt Gets Area Church Post

The Rev. Paul G. Amt will be installed as Washington area institutional missionary of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod at 4 p.m. Sunday at Christ Lutheran Church, 16th and Gallatin sts. nw.

Mr. Amt, whose work is being sponsored by Missouri Synod Lutheran Churches in Greater Washington, will work with patients at municipal hospitals, jails and other institutions.

At the installation service the sermon will be preached by the Rev. Leslie F. Weber, institutional missionary for Baltimore. The Rev. Rudolph S. Ressmeyer, president of the southeasern district of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Snyod, will perform the act of installation.

Following the service, members of the Lutheran Institutional Mission Auxiliary will give a reception for the new missionary in the church parlors.

Lupica, Guest Soloist

Salvatore A. Lupica, tenor, will be the guest soloist at the monthly musical vesper service at Emory Methodist Church, 6100 Georgia ave. nw., at 5 p. m. Sunday.

Presbyterian Sermon Plan To Start

National Presbyterian Church, Connecticut ave. and N st. nw., will launch a new preaching program at 11 a. m. Sunday.

Dr. Skinner

At intervals during the next two years, the church will present representative preachers of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., who will speak on the general theme "The Reformed Faith and American Democracy."

Clergymen who appear during the series will be known as the "National Presbyterian Church Preachers." They will be chosen by the advisory council of the National Presbyterian Church of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church.

First preacher in the series will be the Rev. Dr. W. Sherman Skinner, pastor of East Liberty Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Dr. Skinner, who attended Princeton and Colgate Universities, received degrees at Princeton Seminary and the Universities of Berlin and Marburg. He holds honorary degrees from Temple University and Lafayette College.

Dr. Skinner has been pastor of the Pittsburgh church since 1947. Before that he served in Bethlehem and Germantown, Pa. He has been president of the board of pensions of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., since 1941.

Evangelical Church To Meet Tuesday

The annual business meeting of the Evangelical Church of the Atonement, 2 Rhode Island ave. ne., will be at 8 p. m. Tuesday in the parish hall.

Election of church councilmen, reports to the congregation, and adoption of a budget are scheduled for the meeting.

Government Study Planned By Churches

Christian citizens from every part of the Nation will learn first-hand how the Government works, at a series of Washington seminars sponsored by Protestant church groups during the next five months.

Participants in the seminars will include high school and college students, farmers, clergymen and laymen.

During the seminars, which will last for from 2 to 10 days, the men and women will attend congressional hearings, listen to debates in the House and Senate, and talk with officials from Government departments and private agencies.

More than 20 of these meetings are planned for this year, with the first scheduled to begin Monday.

Student Seminars

Student seminars for high school and college students will be sponsored by Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian and Friends organizations. The National Lutheran Council and the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod will join forces with one seminar for theological students.

Adult seminars are scheduled by the Friends Committee on National Legislation, the department of social welfare of the United Christian Missionary Society of the Disciples of Christ and the Brethren Service Committee.

Four "Churchmen's Washington Seminars," sponsored jointly by five organizations are also scheduled. These seminars will be attended by ministers and laymen representing several Protestant denominations.

For Farm People

One of these churchmen's seminars will be designed for rural people. Another, first to be held since initiation of the seminar program in 1945, will be for "graduates"—those who have attended previous seminars.

These joint seminars will be sponsored by commissions of the Congregational, Evangelical and Reformed, Northern Baptist and Methodist churches and the United Council of Church Women.

Cooperating with them will be the Brethren Service Commission, the department of social welfare of the United Christian Missionary Society of the Disciples of Christ, the National Lutheran Council, the Friends Committee on National Legislation and the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

CALLED HOME

We pay tribute to a great leader of the church and devoted servant of the Lord Jesus Christ, who was called home from The Church Militant to the Church Triumphant on Wednesday, January 11, 1950.

DR. WALTER A. MAIER,

"The Lord gave, the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord." Job 1:21.

Hope Given Up for 55 On Sub; Toll Hits 65

Chatham, England, Jan. 13 (AP).—The Royal Navy tonight said 65 men perished in the sinking of the submarine Truculent.

Hope was abandoned for 55 missing men, believed entombed in the hulk on the muddy bed of the Thames Estuary. Divers fought time and tide in vain today for a sign of life in the wreck.

Ten bodies had been given up by the sea.

Only 15 of the 80 aboard the 1090-ton Pacific war veteran escaped after her collision with the 643-ton Swedish tanker Divina at 7 o'clock last night.

The Admiralty placed an arrest order on the tanker. She is to be held until her owners post bail to cover loss of the Truculent.

A statement by the Admiralty about 24 hours after the accident said "no hope can now be entertained" for any further survivors. The Admiralty first believed 76 persons were aboard, but a re-check showed the Truculent carried 6 officers, 56 enlisted men and 18 dockyard workers.

The Admiralty said lifting of the hull will take three or four days, depending on how badly it is damaged, tidal currents and the position of the submarine in the mud.

In addition to the 65 lost at sea, five men perished today in the crash of a rescue plane that was to have picked up divers for the Truculent operation. The plane crashed at the takeoff from a Royal Air Force station in Scotland.

Operating at depths ranging with the tide from 42 to 54 feet, divers rapped all around the broken hull, but drew no answering taps.

"I couldn't hear a thing," one diver said. The operation stopped at nightfall.

Lieut. C. P. Bowers, the Truculent's commander, was among the 15 men who were rescued.

"She had no chance," Bowers said. "She went down like a stone. She went down almost before we realized what had happened."

Bowers and the other 14 were all on the conning tower of the submarine, which was cruising on the surface, or in the control room directly beneath the tower.

Three bodies were recovered in the night. The destroyer Zest today found six others, washed by the winter tides, in Barrow Deep, about 10 miles northeast of the site of the crash. The tenth was recovered later.

Hope for further survivors waned when the men who escaped from inside the wreck reported they were the only ones who had been in the unflooded part of the ship.

Even if others had escaped, it was considered unlikely they could have survived 24 hours in the icy waters.

[The United Press reported that some of the men were sealed in the torn hulk by their own comrades.

[To save themselves from certain death they had to seal compartment doors to the engine room and leave 35 in a flooded section. They kept the compartment door open for what seemed to be an eternity for their remaining comrades and then slammed the doors.]

The reactions of the survivors made a study in human emotions.

"We all lined up as though waiting for a bus," said Cook R. C. Fry. He told how the men methodically turned the valves that partly flooded the compartments as the first step in the escape procedure.

Then, holding tightly onto overhead pipes and covering up their anxiety with wisecracks, the sailors one by one dived under the surface of the water let into the compartment and into the bottom of the escape hatch, emerging through a layer of protective upper air into the water above.

Some wore oxygen helmets. Others merely held their breath and went through.

"We took 30 or 40 seconds to come to the surface, but it seemed like a year," said Leslie Strikland, a 27-year-old seaman.

A. E. Mossman, the engine-room purser, went through the escape hatch without an oxygen helmet, but snagged on a guywire as he rose toward the surface.

'I Hoped for the Best'

"How long did it take you to get free?" he was asked.

"I thought it was two hours," he said, "but it must have been just a couple of minutes."

Telegrapher Robert Almond, 25, said: "I got out without a set (oxygen helmet). I took a deep breath, hoped for the best and went up through the engine room."

Ashore, relatives of the men waited for news.

Mrs. Maud Hine and a 13-year-old daughter who had been given special leave from school waited all day outside the Chatham Navy Yard gates. Mrs. Hine's 37-year-old husband was the last man known to have left the submarine. He has not been found.

"I have been through all this before," she said stolidly.

Her husband once was among the crew of a submarine sunk in 1942. She waited for four months before learning he was a war prisoner.

Sub Sinks Under Men

Some of the men who fought their way to the surface said others used the same procedure, but probably were swept away by the strong current and were lost in the darkness and fog.

Ten who survived were picked up at varying intervals by the Divina. The five who had been on the bridge were rescued by a Dutch merchant ship, the Almdijk, which heard their cries for help.

Among this group were Bowers and Seaman Fred Henley, a veteran of Russian convoy duty during the war.

"I was just coming up to the conning tower," Henley said, "when the first thing I heard was orders from the captain over the telegraph (intercommunication system) for 'fulastern.' There was some mist at the time. I never saw the Swedish ship until it hit us.

"After the collision, the people on the bridge stayed there three or four seconds and the submarine sank under them."

French Sub Surcouf Sunk By U. S. Ship in War Error

London, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—An American merchantman sank the French submarine Surcouf by mistake in probably the worst submarine disaster of all time, in 1942, the British Admiralty disclosed today.

Almost forgotten among the tragedies of World War II, the Surcouf was the largest submarine ever built—4300 tons—and carried a normal complement of 150 men, probably more in wartime. On April 18, 1942, Gen. Charles De Gaulle's Free French announced the Surcouf was overdue and presumed lost.

Admiralty records, secret at the time, show an American merchantman sank the Surcouf in the mistaken belief she was German.

Miller Warns Of Upheavals In Latin Lands

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 13 (AP).—A high State Department official said today the political "ferment" of Latin America is a sign of a continuing demand for better government.

"That ferment is a great deal better than the stability of death which has been clamped down onto the peoples of eastern Europe," said Assistant Secretary of State Edward G. Miller, jr.

"It is certainly better than the compulsory political inactivity and lack of change which characterize many of the more enduring Latin American dictatorships of the past."

Miller prepared his address for a meeting of the Charleston Rotary Club.

He said that political upheavals among the country's southern neighbors actually are tapering off. Once accepted as commonplace, Miller said, they now occur so rarely that they "shock" American public opinion.

But he said violent political disturbances "do not breed confidence" and certainly do not make for enthusiastic collaboration on the part of the United States with the nations in which they occur "if for no other reason that our citizens would not favor it."

Touching, briefly on the European situation, he said:

"Let us put no faith in those who say that our system and the Soviet system cannot coexist in this world without war."

He said the Marshall Plan must continue, because "we have not made the sacrifices of the past five years in order to surrender all their fruits and beat a retreat."

Religion Held Indispensable In Combatting Threat of Reds

Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews last night said "religion is indispensable to meet the challenges of atheistic communism."

"This country's democracy is based on recognition of a Supreme Being," said Matthews, pointing out that the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution were framed by men who believed strongly in God.

Matthews said he has found in recent years that there is "increasing recognition and admission that hope of the solution of the problems of the world, hope of reestablishment of better conditions lies in religion and in more faithful reliance on religion."

He told the Fleet and District Conference of Navy Chaplains, at the closing meeting of their four-day meeting in the Kennedy-Warren Apartments, that the role of chaplains in the Armed Forces is of supreme importance.

Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, stressed the importance of chaplains in keeping the bluecoats engaged in worthwhile projects during their spare time. Rear Admiral Stanton W. Salisbury, ChC., Chief of Navy Chaplains, presided at the dinner meeting.

At 1 p. m. yesterday, the conference, attended by 23 chaplains, held memorial services for chaplains who lost their lives in service. Services were at the grave of Capt. John Frazier, ChC., USN, first Chief of Navy Chaplains, appointed in 1917, at Arlington Cemetery.

Send Surplus Food Abroad, Group Urges

Buck Hill Falls, Pa., Jan. 13 (AP).—The Foreign Missions Conference of North America today urged overseas shipment of surplus United States food either as an outright gift or on a long-term credit basis.

The conference refused to say whether it had taken any stand on the issue of religion in strife-torn China. It backed President Truman's point four program to help develop backward areas of the world, describing point four as an essential of United States foreign policy which should be placed above "partisan policy."

McKinney, Feerick Help Caps Take Philly, 77-67

Special to The Post

Philadelphia, Jan. 13.—The Washington Caps lost one 10-point advantage but put on two scoring spurts in the final period to drub Philadelphia, 77-67, here tonight before 2000.

Bones McKinney tallied 17 of the points; Coach Bob Feerick, 15. That was the story. With their veterans hitting top form again, the Caps figure to be tough from now on.

Joe Fulks was held to only 14 points but the defensive job took its toll. Dick O'Keefe was banished early in the second period on personals.

The Caps appeared home early when they stretched a 34-29 halftime lead to 41-33 after 3½ minutes of the third period. But the Warriors rallied to tie the score at 50-all as the period ended.

Baskets by Chick Reiser and Johnny Norlander broke the tie for the Caps, and successive streaks of five and nine points insured the victory.

Jack Nichols, who fractured his nose aaginst New York Wednesday night, returned to score 11 points. Reiser, who dropped in five of his 11 attempts from the floor, scored 13.

Chuck Halbert, former Warrior, provided some comic relief at the end. The 6-foot-10 center was expelled from the bench for muttering something Referee Sol Levy resented.

Caps, Warriors Play Here Tonight

The Caps, to a man feeling they've finally hit their stride, get a good chance to prove it against their Philadelphia "cousins" tonight at Uline Arena.

Even when the Warriors were feared, the Caps had their number. The Caps hold an 18-5 edge over four seasons with the Warriors.

Eddie Gottlieb's team looks out of place in the Eastern Division cellar. Led by phenomenal scorer Joe Fulks, Philadelphia always was there or thereabouts in the BAA.

To a certain extent, hard times have befallen Fulks, too. George Mikan then Alex Groza have surpassed pro basketball's original high scorer.

The lanky Kentuckian is still third in total points, but his 17.3 average is far below his old standard. Far below Mikan's 28.1 and Gorzoa's 24.2 also.

W-L Basket Helps GW Win

Confused by the yelling of a capacity crowd, George Russell of Washington-Lee High threw in a basket for George Washington during a crucial moment of the third quarter and helped G. W. score a 42-33 victory last night at the G. W. gym in Alexandria.

G. W. had just pulled ahead, 24-20, in the hard fought game when Russell took a pass from teammate Ken Jones near the G. W. basket. He turned around, and dropped in a neat layup to give the opposing Presidents a six-point lead which they were able to stretch.

Portuguez Stops Young in 8th

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Tuzo Portuguez, chunky Costa Rican mauler stopped Paddy Young of New York's Greenwich Village in 43 seconds of the eighth round of a wild slugfest tonight when Referee Eddie Joseph halted the gory contest because of a bad cut over Young's left eye. Young, outweighed 155 to 158, tried to push off the referee and kept on slugging.

Cubs Farm

Hack Pilots Springfield

Chicago, Jan. 13 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs today announced appointment of Stan Hack, former Cub third baseman and present pilot of Des Moines in the Western League, as manager of the new Springfield (Mass.) club in the International League.

The Cubs yesterday purchased the Newark International loop franchise from the New York Yankees and transferred it to Springfield for 1950 operations in the Triple A circuit.

Hack, 39, managed Des Moines in the Class A Western League for the past two seasons.

Marshall Reports

Sam Baugh Will Be Back With Redskins

OWNER GEORGE P. MARSHALL, beaming happily, reported yesterday that Sammy Baugh will be with the Redskins next season—his fourteenth.

Marshall said Baugh called from Texas to tell him he had decided to be withdrawn from consideration as head coach at Baylor U.

Said Marshall, "Baugh appreciated the Baylor offer but thinks he has a lot of football left in him.

"You bet I'm happy. I couldn't see him quitting while he's on top. Remember, he still was the best passer in the National Football League last year.

"Baugh likes to play football. He really enjoys it. That's the big reason he's been so good for so long."

Back home on his Rotan, Tex., ranch, Baugh said, "It would be a good job and be very nice. But I believe I should stay with Washington.

"I want it known that I appreciate the help given me by all connected with Baylor who boosted me for the job. I sincerely appreciate their efforts and want to thank all of them."

Baugh also recommended Dick Todd for the job. Todd, his old Redskin roommate, is an assistant coach at Texas A. and M. where he was a star back in his college days.

When approached by Baylor officials, Baugh admitted his interest in the job if he "could get things fixed up with the Redskins."

Last November, Baugh signed a one-year "personal service" contract with the Washington pro club.

The Baylor job paid $12,000. Baugh reportedly receives $18,000 to $20,000 with the Redskins.

Snead Low With 69, Hogan Soars to 77

By Russ Newland

Pebble Beach, Calif., Jan. 13 (AP)—Bantam Ben Hogan and his golfing comeback ran into a temporary road block today in the first round of the Bing Crosby $10,000 invitational tournament.

The little gamester, back on the tournament trail after 11 months recovering from an auto accident, found nothing but trouble in the closing holes of his first round over the Cypress Point course. He tacked up a five over par 77 after a provoking session that saw him three-putt two greens and twice visit the ocean beaches to cost himself extra strokes.

While Hogan's game was being wrecked on the rocks and stubborn greens, his arch rival, Sam Snead, breezed home at the tail end of the day to go into the tournament lead.

Snead tapped in a 15-footer for a birdie 3 on the eighteenth and posted a three under par 69. He was out in 36 and home in 33 for the best score of the day.

The late finish enabled Snead to snatch the lead from stocky Newt Bassler, Carmel, Calif., whose 36-34—70 had kept him in front of the field for much of the day.

Hogan, winner of the professional end of Crosby's tournament a year ago, thus got off to a miserable start. He was one of the co-favorites.

The 54-hole event is played on three courses. Tomorrow's second round will take place on the Monterey Peninsula layout. The final round Sunday will be over the championship Pebble Beach course.

After his sensational tie this week with Sam Snead for first place in the Los Angeles Open, Hogan's stock soared sky-high for the Crosby tournament.

For 13 holes today, Hogan held his own. In fact he was a stroke under par going into the fourteenth. He three-putted the 388-yard fourteenth to take a one over par five.

On the fifteenth, a 113-yard downhill soft touch most of the time, Hogan's ball landed on the rocky beach. He tried to play it out, missed one shot and got on the green in three. He needed two putts to go down and carded a five on the par three hole.

Cypress Point's famed sixteenth hole, a par 3 test which requires a 200-yard carry, also saw Hogan blow two extra strokes. His drive landed on the ocean beach, so he played a provisional ball. The first was unplayable, so he took a penalty stroke and a five on his card.

How tough the course played was reflected in the scores of such experienced hands as these:

National Open Champion Cary Middlecoff posted a 74; Byron Nelson and Lew Worsham had 75 and 77 respectively. E. J. "Dutch" Harrison had a 74 and veteran Harry Cooper, a 75.

In addition to taking the individual lead among the professionals, Snead paired up with Roger Kelly of Los Angeles to set the pace in the proamateur best ball division. Snead and Kelly, former California amateur champion, had a combined best ball score of 34-31—65.

Only three pros had the shots to break par today. Besides Snead and Bassler, lanky Dave Douglas of Wilmington, Del., racked up a substandard count, a 36-35—71.

Douglas also was close up on the proamateur competition. He and his partner, Johnny Weissmuller, the Hollywood movie actor, had a best ball of 36-30—66.

Tied with them at 66 were professional George Buck of Westport, Conn., and movie cowboy actor Bob Steele, with a best ball of 35-31.

Terps Seek Area's Title Against GW

Maryland, with only two victories in 13 starts, can wrap up the area's Big Three basketball championship with a victory over George Washington U. tonight at College Park.

The Terps sprang a 71-65 upset against Georgetown last Saturday and need only another surprise performance tonight to furnish some consolation for a disappointing season. They meet their local rivals only once this year.

Flucie Stewart's boys looked impressive against the Hoyas and no one looked better than Soph Dick Koffenberger, who tallied 16 of his 19 points in the second half.

Koffenberger and the team quickly fell off the Georgetown pace, losing to William and Mary, 56-52, and then dropping a 59-49 decision to Richmond last time out.

GW is in a slump itself. VPI stunned the Colonials, 71-59, keeping them from taking the Southern Conference lead. Against a Richmond team they beat here, 66-49, Bill Reinhart's lads had to go into overtime to take a 62-56 verdict in their last game.

GW has a 5-2 Conference mark; Maryland, 1-6.

In another interesting neighborhood argument, American U. plays at Catholic U. in a Mason-Dixon Conference game. Potentially strong A. U. hasn't come up to preseason expectations, but Coach Staff Cassell has hopes his boys will hit their stride.

'Neer' Freeze Helps A. U. To 60-56 Win

American University's Eagles scored their third win against one lost in the Mason-Dixon Conference, 60-56, over Mt. St. Mary's last night at A. U.

The win gives the Eagles an overall record of six victories against five defeats. Mt. St. Mary's has won one game and lost five in the Conference with an over-all record of one win in nine starts.

The lead changed hands several times but was tied only once. Little Jack Neer preserved the Eagles' win by freezing the ball for the last two minutes.

Sherwood Webster, for the second straight game, paced the Eagles with 16 points. Gene Janis scored 13 points for the losers.

Scarborough Gets Second Pact Still Calling for Slash

A second contract, containing a higher salary figure than originally offered Ray Scarborough for next season, has been sent out to the sturdy righthander, Washington club officials said last night.

Scarborough returned unsigned the first contract sent out and no further word has been heard from him. Vice President Calvin Griffith refused to disclose the new figure, but it was reported to be still below Scarborough's 1949 salary.

Bladensburg, Rainier Win

Mount Rainier nosed out Greenbelt, 38-36, and Bladensburg coasted over Maryland Park, 45-31, last night in a Prince Georges High League basketball doubleheader before 2000 at College Park.

Greenbelt waged an uphill fight to cut down an eight-point deficit, and finally tied it, 31-31, with four minutes left. However, two baskets by Ken Moffett put Mount Rainier in front for keeps. Bob Roberts gave Greenbelt its second half with 12 points.

Hawk Foreman and George Clayton each tossed in 12 points as Bladensburg took it easy in the nightcap.

Hoyas Scare St. John's But Lose, 67-66

New York, Jan. 13—St. John's closed with a rush to edge Georgetown, 67-66, and avert one of the biggest upsets of the season tonight. A foul shot by Frank Mulzoff with 15 seconds left provided the victory.

The Hoyas, 20-point underdogs, held a 63-58 lead with only three and a half minutes left. But they couldn't stop Bob (Zeke) Zawoluk, sensational St. John soph.

Zawoluk, 6-foot-6 center, scored five of his 28 points when they counted most. After tying the score at 64-all, he dribbled around lanky Dan Supkis and curled in a layup.

Mulzoff dropped the foul that appeared only window-dressing at the time. But it proved all-important when Supkis sank a basket in the last second.

The loss was the third for Georgetown in eight starts. St. John's, one of the country's leaders, has lost only to CCNY in 15 outings.

Among Nation's Females

Marlene Bauer Top Athlete

Louise Suggs Second, Babe Zaharias Third in AP Poll

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (AP).—Marlene Bauer, a poised 15-year-old golf star who has been swinging a club since she was 3, has been chosen the female athlete of the year—the youngest girl ever to win that prized honor in the annual Associated Press polls.

MARLENE BAUER

The pretty blonde member of a Los Angeles golfing family beat out two veterans of the links—Louise Suggs and Babe Didrikson Zaharias—for the No. 1 position.

Marvelous Marlene, who'll probably be back for many more helpings of this award, received 17 first-place votes and 73 points from the Nation's sportswriters and sportscasters.

Miss Suggs, the women's pro golf titlist from Atlanta, got 13 firsts and 58 points. The Babe, a four-time winner of this honor, finished third this time with seven first-place ballots and 49 points.

Mrs. Margaret Osborne duPont, the national tennis champion, wound up fourth with six first-place votes and 41 points. Three points were awarded for first, two for second and one for third.

Marlene's father, golf teacher David Bauer, has been aiming his prodigy for the golf heights almost from the time she was able to walk. He gave Marlene her first lesson when she was 3 and entered her in tourneys before she was 8.

A cool, little gal who can make every kind of a shot, Marlene blazed into the spotlight this year when she won the first National Junior Golf Championship at Philadelphia. Previous to that, she and her 21-year-old sister, Alice, had cleaned up everything in sight in California.

Miss Bauer kept on coming. She achieved the semifinals of the National Amateur, beating former champion Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare en route to the round of four. She next reached the final of the Women's Texas Open at Forth Worth and then cemented her claim to golfing greatness by humbling the fame Babe Zaharias.

Marlene whipped the Babe on the 21st green in the semifinal of the Hardscrabble Open at Fort Smith, Ark.

They Will Join Dixie's Showdown Fight Today

By Will Grimsley

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—All seven cats were out of the bag, finally, as the NCAA and the rebel Dixie bloc girded for a showdown fight on the sanity code tomorrow.

The University of Maryland, Boston College, and Villanova were reported to be the three teams whose identity was a secret until today. They are expected to line up with the four previously listed offenders—the University of Virginia, The Citadel, Virginia Tech and Virginia Military Institute, all of whom face recommended expulsion.

The matter is to be brought before the convention's windup meeting with a two-thirds vote of those present needed to expel.

Boston College's Athletic Director John P. Curley admitted this morning his school was one of those on the griddle. Boston informed the NCAA, as did the others, it could not conform with the new code relating to athletic subsidies.

Byrd Old Advocate of Aid

Villanova had made no official statement but Coach Jim Leonard said, "Sure, we make no pretense. We are paying the tuition and board of some of our athletes."

Maryland's militant president, Dr. H. C. Byrd, is a long-time advocate of athletic scholarship under university administration. He appeared before the NCAA council yesterday, along with representatives of the well known "[illegible]nners."

The NCAA has steadfastly refused to name any of the schools it is attempting to discipline.

The Citadel already has withdrawn from the national body with a sharp blast against the NCAA's tactics in enforcing the code.

The NCAA, however, has not received a formal resignation, according to Executive Assistant Walt Byers. The Citadel merely notified the organization it has quit paying dues, Byers said. A school must miss two years' dues before falling from grace.

Waldorf Heads Coaches.

The next to last day of the convention was other wise on the mild side with these main developments:

Dr. Karl Leib, president of the NCAA and father of the sanity code, warned that tomorrow's session would be "the most important in the history of college athletics."

L. R. (Dutch) Meyer of Texas Christian sharply criticized bowl games as responsible for the instability in the coaching profession and for proselyting of athletes.

Lynn (Pappy) Waldorf, snow-haired coach of the University of California, was named president of the American Football Coaches Association to succeed Meyer.

The large television panel accepted a recommendation of the Eastern College Athletic Conference that an active television committee be appointed immediately If we take the latter course I predict we will have a chaos in college athletics such as we have never seen before.

by the NCAA. This committee would make a thorough investigation on the impact of television on college athletics.

The television committee of the ECAC said it had "come to the conclusion that television is a potential threat to the financial structure of college athletics."

The recommendation, which See NCAA, Page 11, Column 2.

Terps Say They Didn't Violate Code

MARYLAND is NOT in violation of the National Collegiate Athletic Association sanity code, school officials said last night.

Maryland was named yesterday at the annual NCAA meeting in New York as one of seven schools facing expulsion at today's NCAA showdown vote for alleged infractions of the code.

The Washington Post learned that:

1. Maryland is listed among the violators simply because Maryland did not reply to an NCAA questionnaire as to whether the school is or is not complying with the code;

2. Maryland adopted this tactic of NOT replying to the questionnaire as a bit of parliamentary strategy in order to make sure of having an opportunity to appear before the NCAA compliance committee.

Maryland, like all other members of the NCAA, was given until September 1, 1949, to reply to the NCAA questionnaire. When Maryland did not reply, the NCAA listed it among those "not complying."

Schools not complying with the code were called before the NCAA for a hearing. This was what Maryland wanted in order to express the viewpoint of not only Maryland but other Southern schools.

Maryland's technique worked well for Dr. H. C. Byrd, university president, was given a full hearing before NCAA officials.

Maryland officials said that "we have been very careful to be in absolute compliance with the NCAA code . . . we do not have alumni aid or anything like that . . . there are no charges whatsoever against us by the NCAA."

How Do Big 10 Schools Do It? Byrd Asks

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Dr. H. C. (Curley) Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, had this to say tonight about the possible expulsion of the several schools from the N.C.A.A. for code violations:

"All schools that have good football teams subsidize. The conditions of granting scholarships cannot be the same for all these schools, not every school has the same number of jobs around the campus. Not every school has the same military rules, and they affect your athletic programs.

"What we want to know is this: A school like Ohio State claims to comply with the code, yet it comes up with a Rose Bowl team. What practices did they employ to build these teams?

"We want a survey, a study, to get this picture clear in mind. V.P.I. has won only one game in the last two years. Ohio State and Michigan say they are complying. We want to know how they turn out those teams."

Byrd, a former Maryland coach, will be the spokesman for the three protesting conferences—Southern, Southeastern and Southwestern—at tomorrow's meeting.

O'Donnell Paces Eastern's Upset of Wilson

Jim Gets 25; Central Trims Anacostia

By West McLean
Post Reporter

Alert and aggressive Eastern scored the upset of the young interhigh series by outrunning and outscoring Wilson, 60-49, in the second game of last night's double-header at Uline Arena.

Central came through as expected to beat Anacostia, 41-36 in the opener before a crowd of 2200.

Jimmy O'Donnell put Eastern in front to stay with a quick layup for the first 2 of his 25 points. Eastern used a racehorse style to run Wilson off the court, rolling up a 20-7 lead after the first quarter.

Wilson pulled up to 33-25 at intermission, and seemed on the way to pulling the game out of the loss column as Don Scott sank a layup at the start of the second half to make the score, 33-27.

Richie Hite, Kenny Atchison and Franny Dyer started hitting, however, and Wilson couldn't get any closer. Jim Young was high for the Green Tigers with 14 points.

In the first game, Terry Gregory, accounted for 9 points in the first five minutes to give Central a 10-4 lead and the defending champs were never headed. Gregory was high-point man for the game with 17 while runner-up honors went to Anacostia's Barry Ryan with 14.

Track Stars Here Tonight

Wade, Ross Race In Mile at Armory

More than 400 athletes are ready to answer the opening gun of the major indoor track and field season tonight at 8 o'clock when the Evening Star games begin at the National Guard Armory.

Twenty-seven events are on the program, but most attention will be centered on the mile.

Nine top flight competitors are in the running, including Yale's George Wade last year's winner, Villanova's Browning Ross, winner in the first Star games two years ago, and Wisconsin's Don Gehrmann, who ran a good 4:09.5 mile in capturing the Melrose title last season.

Ross set the meet record of 4:13.7 two years ago on the flat track which has six laps to the mile.

Some of the Nation's top runners are on the entry list. Among them are:

Hurdles—Jim Gehrdes of Penn State, who won most of last year's trophies, Bill Fleming of Notre Dame, who beat Gehrdes in the Sugar Bowl games, and Billy Mitchell, of Georgetown, who finished right behind Gehrden in most of last year's meets.

600 Yards—Herb McKenley, Jamaica Olympic star, who claims he's just beginning to learn how to run indoors.

1000 Yards—Mal Whitfield, formerly of Ohio State, and claimant to the U. S. title.

Two Miles—Curtis Stone of the Shannahan Club of Philadelphia, and John Joe Barry, the Irish mile champion, who enters Villanova next month.

Sprints—Bill Mathis of Illinois and Marcellus Boston, formerly of Iowa, both Washington, D. C., products and graduates of Cardozo High. They'll run on a 100-yards straightaway.

High Jump—Bill Albans, who jumped 6 feet 5 inches in last year's meet, and who won six first places in last winter's Maryland Invitational.

Thirty colleges, 7 high schools and 15 athletic clubs have entered.

McKenley, Whitfield Go in Middle Distance

Duke mile relay team, and Howard Bass, former Anacostia High 220-yard runner, who'll represent V. M. I. in that event.

The program:

Order of events and time schedule:
11. Invitation 70-yard high hurdles (3 heats) 8 p. m.; 2. Invitation high jump, 8 p. m.; 3. Invitation pole vault, 8 p. m.; 4. Dr. Gordon Named To Gallinger Post

Appointment of Dr. Gerhart J. Gordon, 46-year-old Delaware psychiatrist to the long-vacant post of chief medical officer in psychiatry at Gallinger Hospital was announced yesterday.

Dr. Gordon

Gordon is now a psychiatrist at the Delaware State Mental Hospital at Farnhurst. He has been attached to the staff there since he came to this country from Germany in 1934.

He will be the first person to hold the $7911-a-year post which was established more than two years ago. Dr. Joseph L. Gilbert, District alienist, has been acting in the position.

Dr. P. A. E. Stebbing, Gallinger superintendent said: "We hope this means we can render some psychiatric treatment as well as diagnosis." He added that Gordon is very sympathetic with a plan, urged by citizens groups, to establist a mental hygiene clinic at the hospital for residents of the eastern part of the city.

Gordon was notified of his appointment yesterday. He had asked that he be permitted to give 30 days notice to the Delaware institution.

Gordon obtained his medical degree from the University of Berlin in 1930 and did graduate work at the University of Frankfurt. He is a member of the American Board of Psychiatry and the American Psychiatric Association. He holds a license to practice in New York and, by reciprocity, in Delaware.

Rossellini Held Likely to Get Divorce Today

Turin, Italy, Jan. 13 (AP).—Film Director Roberto Rossellini's friends were confident tonight an Italian court would heed his plea to clear away one of the obstacles to his marriage with Swedish film star Ingrid Bergman.

Rossellini has asked an Assizes Court here to recognize as valid in Italy a Vienna court decree which annulled his marriage to Marcella de Marchis.

Final disposition by the court was expected Saturday. The state has asked the court not to recognize the annulment, but this was regarded here merely as a formality.

Justice Domenico Pieretti-Grivan, who was to preside in the case, told a reporter his court is concerned only with checking whether the decree was issued by the Austrian court, as set forth on December 23, 1949. An Italian Court of Assizes would have no authority to investigate the reasons for which Austrian judges granted the annulment.

Rossellini and his former wife were represented in court here by attorneys.

In Rome, an attorney for Rossellini told a reporter there was absolutely no basis for a report printed in the Turin Gazeta del Popolo which said Rossellini was under the influence of drugs at the time he married Marcella. The lawyer denied that this was the ground upon which the Vienna annulment was granted.

Policeman Cleared of Attack Charge

Pvt. Thomas W. Oldham, station clerk of the Fourteenth Precinct, was exonerated yesterday by a Police Trial Board of a charge of wilfully maltreating and using unnecessary violence toward a prisoner.

The complaint was lodged against Oldham by Frank R. Christian, 31, 1426 Rock Creek Ford rd. nw., one-legged truck driver, who said he was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for a ruptured eardrum as the result of an alleged attack by the policeman.

At the hearing, Oldham denied the charge, declaring that he grabbed Christian by the arm and belt after he rose from a chair before being released on collateral on a charge of passing a red light.

Capt. William T. Murphy, then commanding the precinct, and Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon, precinct officer, testified they were in the station house and heard no commotion or violence.

Thieves Labor Long To Lift $600 Boiler

Montgomery County police yesterday were searching for a group of bold thieves who spent several hours Wednesday loading a large apartment-size boiler on a truck and removing it from a vacant lot at Glenmont.

The theft was witnessed by several persons, police said, who thought they were workmen hired to move the boiler. The boiler, valued at $600, is the property of Louis Gregory, a building contractor of 1849 Good Hope rd. se.

Schools Use Glycol Vapor

Alexander School, Silver Spring, Maryland, and Kalorama Day School have installed A.P.S. Glycol Vapor Rolls to reduce the infections airborne bacteria and viruses that may cause colds, measles, mumps, scarlet fever, flu and other respiratory infections.

By the use of the A.P.S. Vapor Rolls they hope to prevent cross infections from one pupil to another.

Triethylene Glycol Vapor is odorless, tasteless, non-toxic and invisible. It will not injure fabrics or paintings.

School rooms are the source of many cross infections of children's diseases but with the proper use of triethylene glycol vapor, the probability of airborne infections may be reduced.

The A.P.S. Vapor Roll is distributed in this territory by Health Equipment & Service Corp., 904 Bonifant Street, Silver Spring, Maryland. Your inquiries are invited.

$85,000 Blaze Hits Tire Firm In West Virginia

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 13 (AP).—A fire which struck Charleston's business district with spectacular suddenness caused damage estimated at $85,000 in the space of an hour's time today.

Loss of the Nu Tread Tire Co. was estimated by one of the firm's officials at $50,000, and Fire Chief O. E. Boggess said other damage, including the building which housed Nu Tread, would run around $35,000.

Mincey Statement Admits 'Urge' to Rape Girl But Denies Act

Hugh G. Mincey had a momentary "urge" to rape the 4-year-old girl he is accused of attacking sexually, but, he asserted, he did not carry out his desire.

These allegations were contained in a statement made by Mincey to police following his arrest and read yesterday to the District Court jury trying Mincey on a rape charge.

The statement, as read by Prosecutor Cecil Heflin, described how on the day of the assault—last September 13—it rained and Mincey did not go to his job as an iron worker.

Instead, according to the statement, he loafed around his room at 815 H st. nw., most of the day drinking and reading.

Mincey's statement described how he left his room to buy more whisky then returned to the rooming house to visit the bathroom.

While he was in the bathroom, the statement said, the little girl rushed in on him "swearing and hollering."

"She just about fell in my lap . . . I grabbed her in a fit of madness . . . I slapped her all over her body . . . I picked her up and put her on my lap facing me . . . I had a desire for a split second for intercorse with her . . . but when I saw her condition it passed . . . I put her in a bathtub seeing she was bluddy all over . . . I took off her clothes and started to wash them . . . she started to holler . . . I got panicky and went to my room . . ."

Medical testimony earlier had indicated the girl had been sexually maltreated.

Heflin, in his opening statement indicated he would ask the jury to demand the death penalty.

If the jury does so Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough, presiding at the trial, will have no alternative under District law to sentencing Mincey to death. If the jury finds Mincey guilty of rape but does not recommend death, the defendant is liable to a 10-30-year sentence.

Census Bureau Hiring Of Temporary Workers To Start After July 1

CENSUS: Five thousand of its temporary clerks will be located here. The remaining 3500 will be in Philadelphia.

In Philadelphia, some of the work will be done on the population and housing censuses, as well as editing, coding, and punching. At headquarters, all the work will be handled on the agriculture, irrigation, and drainage censuses, all tabulations and results, and material prepared for publication. In addition, the remaining work on population and housing censuses will be carried on here.

Hiring for the mass of clerical jobs both here and in Philadelphia won't start until after July 1, when field reports will be in. A Civil Service exam for temporary clerical and tabulating machine exams is now open for the jobs here. Civil Service reports it has a sufficient number of people available on old registers to fil the 3500 Philadelphia jobs.

Meantime, the Census Bureau has informed Representative Ed Rees (R., Kans.) that veterans will be given preference for its jobs. Any contrary report, Acting Director Philip Hauser wrote Rees, is "unfounded.". Hauser explained that veterans have had legal preference for Census jobs for more than 30 years. He added that he was "proud" of the way the bureau had administered the preference law.

SPEED: A total of 14,731 persons have been rated eligible on general clerical exam given last November. The register was set up less than two months after the test was held, a speed record. More than 59,000 persons applied for the test, of whom 40,000 were in this city, but only 33,000 took it.

AWARD: Nominations are being made for the first William A. Jump Memorial Award. The award will be made annually to a Federal employe who is outstanding in the public administration field. It will consist of a gold key and a certificate.

Members of the board of trustees for the award are Daniel W. Bell, president, American Security & Trust Co.; Earl W. Loveridge, assistant chief, Forest Service; W. Arthur Minor, assistant to the Agriculture Secretary; Ralph S. Roberts, Agriculture's director of finance; Elmer Staats, assistant director, Budget Bureau, and M. L. Wilson, Agriculture's director of extension work. They were all associated with the late William A. Jump, a top-notch public servant.

NOTES: The Public Health Service is accepting applications from pharmacists for appointments in its regular corps . . . Collier's Magazine is running a series of articles on Post Office's inspection service. It has decided that the inspectors are about the finest police force in the world . . . The Federal Personnel Manual has been boiled down by 88 pages by condensation and the use of simple and direct language . . . The Navy is saving about $400 a day by the use of less water in its New York shipyard. The conservation program is being sparked by Admiral Paul Nibecker who formerly headed the industrial relations section here.

DECISIONS: Comptroller General Lindsey Warren has handed down these decisions involving Federal workers:

1. That the Treasury Department may not use Government money to pay the transfer costs back here from Chicago of Bureau of Public Debt employes who plan to retire. The bureau was moved to Chicago during the war and it was planned to return it here by this time. However, the return here of the bureau has been indefinitely postponed.

2. That an employe retired on disability and who is later reemployed does not need to repay Uncle Sam for sick or annual leave advanced to him during his previous employment.

3. That the recent law that allowed a night differential to be computed on either standard or daylight time was effective on September 7, 1949. It isn't retroactive even though Congress mentioned no effective date in it.

Jurist Rules Rent Boosts Are Legal In Greenbelt

U. S. Government Held Not Subject To Controls Under 1947 Federal Act

Special to The Washington Post

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 13.—In an unprecedented ruling, Federal Judge W. Calvin Chestnut today held that the United States Government in its capacity as a landlord is not subject to rent control.

Judge Chesnut made the finding in granting a motion for a summary judgment dismissing injunction proceedings filed by residents of Greenbelt to restrain the community manager from enforcing rent increases allowed by the housing expediter last summer.

The increases affected about 1586 of the 1892 housing units at Greenbelt, and raised the monthly levy for rentals an average of $6, or about 9 percent.

Judge Chesnut made two find-

First, he ruled that the Federal Rent Act since 1947 has specifically excluded Government from provisions of the act.

Although in the case heard today, the ruling specifically excluded the United States Government, counsel expressed the belief that the exclusion of Government is broad enough to exclude State or municipal governments which may have previously been subject to control in their position as landlords.

1947 Act Shifts Pattern

The original 1942 act controlling rent, in defining the word "persons" subject to the act, specifically included the United States Government in that definition. The 1947 act and subsequent rent control measures failed to include Government in the definition, it was argued by Norman P. Ramsey, assistant United States Attorney for Maryland. Judge Chesnut agreed.

Secondly, the judge found that none of the rent statutes, which were passed under war powers, give the right to individual tenants or landlords to seek a court injunction restraining the enforcement of a rent increase or any other order affecting a landlord or tenant. The right of injunction is given only to the housing expediter, the judge found.

Increases Allowed

Actually, it was pointed out during the procedings, Tighe Woods, housing expediter, allowed an increase in the Greenbelt rentals on the grounds that the levies should be increased to make them comparable with similar private accommodations at the time of the rent freeze date. Judge Chesnut pointed out that the later rent acts actually are "decontrol" acts, rather than control measures. He said there has been a "distinct change" in the policy of Congress, which is to get away from the wartime controls on rents.

Hicks Named Head Of Sligo Creek Group

Thomas F. Hicks has been elected president of the Sligo Creek Terrace Citizens Association.

At the association's election Thursday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Slye, 7314 Trescott ave., Takoma Park, the other officers also elected were: S. A. Tobeym, vice president; Mrs. G. H. Cole, secretary, and R. Lippman, treasurer.

Police Check Phone Tips in Warring Case

Underworld Informers Call in Dozens of 'Leads' in Holdup

Underworld informers funneled dozens of rumors into police headquarters yesterday in connection with the "out-of-town professional mobsters" who, with the aid of a local "punk" robbed Emmitt Warring, onetime numbers king, of some $20,000 Monday.

Police here were busy all day and night running down tips phoned in by gangland informants.

Detectives were particularly eager to learn the identity of the Washington man who "fingered" Warring—figured out when the victim would and would not be at home, when he would have a great amount of cash in his safe, and how many other people could be expected to be at his fashionable residence at 3900 Macomb st. nw.

The timing of the three thugs, described by Police Chief Robert J. Barrett as "out-of-town professional mobsters" proved to be based on accurate information.

First, a man gained entrance to the Warring home by posing as a delivery boy. Two accomplices joined him, slugging Warring's brother-in-law, William Cady. Then the trio tied up Cady and the maid and lay in wait for the return of Warring.

When the one-time master mind of a two-million-dollar numbers racket returned, the trio threw a towel in his face, forced him at gunpoint to open his safe.

Barrett said he had information the same bandits snatched the stakes at a northeast floating crap game last November—and the stakes were said to amount to more than the Warring loot.

One serious problem facing police is that Warring has indicated he will not make an official report. So even if and when police nab the "mobsters" and the punk," prosecution would be stymied for want of a complainant.

However, a police official said, "We'll of course try again and use all possible pressure to change Warring's mind—when we find the guys who did it, and we will."

Barrett, in ordering an all-out effort to track down the thugs, expressed alarm the robbers may be emboldened by their recent successes to "go into the homes of businessmen."

Myers Held for Grand Jury In Death of Mrs. Nina Campbell

conscious on the bed, she told me. She said the nurse tried to revive Nina, then took her pulse and said she was gone," Campbell testified.

"I was frantic, so I went over there. I knocked on the door. A man asked who it was and I gave him my name. Then I heard moaning, a sound as though something were dragging across the floor, and the sound of a door shutting," he continued.

Myers at Door

"Myers came to the door. His hair was hanging down one side of his face. His eyes were glazed. He had a bottle—it looked like gin to me—in his right hand. He looked like he had been tangling with someone," Campbell said.

Asked if he was sure that it was Myers who answered the door, Campbell declared: "I'd know that face anywhere."

The husband said he left the apartment house but returned about 3 a. m.

Campbell said he did not report the matter to police until the next afternoon about 3 p. m., when he failed to hear from his wife.

"I had hoped until then that the nurse had revived my wife after my aunt left the place and that she had taken Nina somewhere else to care for her," he explained.

Mrs. Earnshaw Next

Mrs. Earnshaw, 29, was next on the stand. She said she had contacted Myers about the abortion. She said she had met him only once, about a year ago, but had heard through someone else that he knew where abortions could be performed.

Both she and the next witness, Miss Ruth Childs, 34, educational director of nursing at Children's Hospital, to whom the apartment belonged, told how they left Myers and Mrs. Campbell alone in the apartment at his request, and went for a walk.

When they returned, they found Mrs. Campbell lying face up on the bed, apparently unconscious. She was clad in a slip, pulled up around her waist, they said.

"I tried to revive her with artificial respiration. I poured ice water on her face. Then I tried to take her pulse, but couldn't find it. She had blue splotches on her neck and face," Miss Childs testified.

"I turned to Ralph and said she was dead. He said she was not. I told him he'd have to do something quick. So I ran downstairs and went to Children's Hospital for the night," she continued.

Miss Childs said she was on duty the next morning, when Myers called the acting director of nurses about 8 a. m.

"He told her I was dead. She said I couldn't be, because I was standing right beside her. So I took the phone. Ralph said there was someone dead in the apartment and there was blood all over the place. I asked him who it was. He said he didn't know, but that he thanked God it wasn't me," Miss Childs stated.

Miss Childs added that she finally called police several times and arranged to meet them at the apartment house when she got off when the body was found lying at 3:30 p. m. She was with police just inside the door of the blood-spattered apartment, she said.

"I passed out when I saw her," she added.

When asked if she knew an abortion was to be performed when she left the apartment with Mrs. Earnshaw the night before, Miss Childs replied:

"No, I didn't know for sure. I may have been slightly suspicious that something unusual was going on but I didn't know. I trusted him.

She said Myers had had a key to her apartment since last September. She said she had been going around with him but had believed he was divorced. She admitted she knew he had three almost grown children.

Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy told the jury the girl had died of an air embolism, the result of an unsuccessful abortion. In addition, she was beaten about the face, head and entire body and there appeared to be teeth marks on her arm and thigh. He said he could not determine if she was beaten before or after she died of the abortion, but that none of the bruises on her body were severe enough to have caused death.

PUC to Hold Transit Fare Hike Hearing

Flanagan Says No Boost Will Be Made Immediately

District PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan yesterday announced there will be a public hearing before any consideration is given to a fare increase for Capital Transit Co.

Flanagan issued the statement before a hearing date had been set because of "public concern" expressed at the company's request for an immediate increase without a hearing.

The Public Utilities Commission has never granted a rate increase without a hearing, Flanagan said.

In the two days since CTC filed its petition for an increase in fares to 15 cents, or six tokens for 80 cents, and elimination of the $1.75 weekly pass, the PUC has received a number of protest letters from individuals and organizations. Most expressed indignation at the company's request that the increase take effect January 22 without a hearing and that the passes be eliminated.

The office of Representative Earl T. Wagner (D., Ohio), said he had sent a letter to the PUC yesterday afternoon objecting "with all the vehemence at my disposal" to granting an increase without a hearing.

Wagner said he intends next week "to take further action on the floor of the House to block any attempt . . . to jam through any such move . . ."

Requests for a hearing were also received yesterday from the Progressive Party of the District and Local 209, Cooks, Pastry Cooks and Kitchen Employes (AFL).

On the question of the pass, one person suggested different colors or distinctive markings, one for men, another for women. This would prevent use of a pass by the whole family, he said.

Paul Stone, 22, of 1728 10th st. nw., was sideswiped by a hit-run auto in the 900 block of S st. nw. last night, police reported, and was taken to Freedmen's Hospital with head injuries. His condition was undetermined.

S. E. Groups Map Congress Battle For New Schools

Committee Named To Plead on 'Hill' For 2 Elementary, 2 Higher Schools

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Representatives of more than 20 Southeast civic groups last night blueprinted a fight they will take to Congress for new school construction.

They want a minimum program of two elementary schools, a junior high school and a senior high school for the Congress Heights and Washington Highlands areas.

Funds will be requested in the 1951 budget on which the House Appropriations Subcommittee is now holding hearings. In the budget is a request by the Commissioners for funds to buy land for the two elementary school sites.

No building funds are asked, however.

Doctor Heads Committee

The 35 delegates who met at the Congress Heights Methodist Church elected Dr. Otis Farley, of the Eastern Branch Kiwanis Club and chief of medicine at St. Elizabeths Hospital, as chairman of a committee to represent them before Congress.

The delegates from citizens associations, service clubs and parent-teacher groups also voted to ask for restoration of funds to enlarge the play area at the Stanton Elementary School.

Funds were requested by school officials for this purpose but the request was eliminated by the Commissioners.

Howard A. Nessen, chairman of the education committee of the Washington Highlands Citizens Association, set the tone of the meeting.

"The Commissioners have no

"Commissioners Can't Brag"

reason to be proud that they can brag about a two-million-dollar surplus in the 1951 budget when we have little children out here getting a half day of education," Nessen said.

"Many of us stood before Congress for years and asked for a sales tax for new schools. We are paying the sales tax but where are the adequate educational facilities for our children?"

Citing figures from the school census of 1948, Nessen declared that by 1952 more than 4000 children will be crowded into three elementary schools which have a combined capacity of only 2000.

In Charter

Falls Church Citizens Rap Fiscal Plans

By Judy Spivak
Post Reporter

Falls Church citizens, given a chance to criticize their proposed new city charter at a public hearing last night, aimed their chief criticism at proposals giving the City Council power to levy a public utility use tax and to issue bonds without a referendum.

About 50 persons attended the meeting in the Madison School which dealt with the first seven of the charter's 21 chapters. The hearing was adjourned until next Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the Madison School.

Other Provisions Questioned

Other charter provisions which were questioned last night included those establishing penalties for the first time on omitted property taxes, those providing for a change from the election of city councilmen by wards to election-at-large, and those giving the council power to operate gas and electric public utilities if it desires.

The proposed charter, which sets up a city manager form of government, is now under advisement by the City Council, which must approve it. Additional approval by a two-thirds majority of both Houses of the State Legislature is necessary before the charter can become law.

Objections to a proposal allowing the city council to tax users of public utilities were voiced by W. D. Brewer, 1300 Seaton la., representing the Southwest Falls Church Citizens Association.

He said the tax, which would fall on users of gas and electric heating but not on those with coal or oil heat, would be "a gross discrimination and should be stricken from the charter."

George T. Reeves, former school board member, also called the utilities tax "strikingly discriminatory" and labeled it a "hidden business tax" which would fall more heavily on merchants than on home owners.

Strong opposition appeared to a charter clause which gives the city council power to issue bonds through adoption of an ordinance. A present dual referendum of city freeholders and later of qualified voters, would be eliminated under the charter proposal.

However, a referendum would be required if 10 percent of the city's qualified voters submitted a petition requesting it.

City Councilman Lee M. Rhoads, who was also a member of the charter commission, called the provision "a departure in order to make it less cumbersome for the city to operate."

However, a half-dozen citizens said they wished to see city freeholders (resident property owners) have a vote on any bond issue first.

Virtually no controversy was stirred by the greatly increased powers given the city manager under the proposed charter.

Pinball Firm Puts 50 Units In Arlington

More than 50 pinball machines have been installed this week in Arlington County and Alexandria, it was learned yesterday.

Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker of Arlington promptly warned that "these machines will be eliminated from the county. As fast as we catch people gambling on them, we're going to take them out and destroy them. And there's never been one of these machines that hasn't been used for gambling."

Only six pinball machines have been installed in Alexandria as against about 50 in Arlington, but Howard W. Smith, jr., Commonwealth's Attorney for Alexandria, promised "a close watch" on them.

The pinball machines—unknown in Arlington until now—were installed by the Hirsh Coin Machine Corp. of 1309 New Jersey ave. nw., in restaurants, drugstores and taverns.

Hirsh de La Viez, president of the company, said the installations were the result of several hundred circulars sent to businessmen in the past two weeks.

De La Viez said each machine bears a card which reads: "Positively no gambling, no prizes, no free games and no rewards. Children under 16 cannot play this machine."

"We do not put our machines within several blocks of school buildings," said de La Viez. "And if our company learns of any instances where the machines are being used for gambling, we will remove the machines immediately."

De La Viez said merchants pay nothing when the machines are installed and are given half of the machine's take after the cost of license fees is paid.

The operators are required to pay to the State a $1000 fee and a tax of $25.75 on each machine.

Tamm Reverses Self, Bars Fay's Gaming Raid Evidence

Judge Edward A. Tamm yesterday reversed himself in District Court and suppressed evidence seized March 25 at the State Wide News Distributors, Colmar Manor, Md., in one of eight raids made that day in United States Attorney George Morris Fay's gambling investigation.

Judge Tamm ruled yesterday that the search warrant charged an offense that was alleged to have occurred too long a period before the warrant was issued.

Five men were arrested at State Wide and indicted by the special gambling grand jury on charges of conspiring to violate District gambling laws with four men at Barber's Newsstand, 427 10th st. nw.

Ruling on Evidence

In October Judge Tamm suppressed evidence seized at the newsstand but ruled that evidence seized at State Wide was lawfully taken.

The affidavit supporting the search warrants in both cases were identical, and charged offenses that were alleged to have occurred in January, 71 days before the raid.

The State Wide search warrant, however, was supported by an additional affidavit, stating that two telephones were, as of March 25, listed to the State Wide concern, which distributes sports results over leased wires.

On motion of William H. Collins, attorney for Murray J. Olf, State Wide proprietor, Tamm agreed to rehear the motion to suppress evidence.

Yesterday Judge Tamm said he felt he had erred in his previous decision. He said the telephone affidavit was not sufficient to support the search warrant.

No Physical Evidence

As a result of his ruling the Government will have to go to trial against the eight defendants February 27 without any of the physical evidence seized at either location.

One of the original defendants, Garner S. Barbour, died of a heart attack shortly after he was indicted in April. He was the proprietor of Barber's Newsstand.

The five defendants arrested at State Wide, with offices at 3701 Bladensburg, rd., Colmar Manor, are Olf, William S. Doyle, 1956 Biltmore st. nw.; Sidney Frischer, 2225 N st. nw.; William Cohen, 1667 Good Hope rd. se., and Lee Thomas Lewis, 3612 39th ave., Colmar Manor.

The three defendants arrested at the newsstand are William Quinn, 1018 S. Carolina ave. se.; his brother John, of the Harrington Hotel, and Thomas B. White, 1104 N. Quincy st., Arlington, Va.

Maryland Asked to Create Sewer, Water Fund Agency

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin yesterday urged the Maryland State Legislature to create a new agency to lend funds to municipalities for building sewage disposal and water facilities.

The action was taken at the closing session of the commission's two-day meeting at the Hotel Washington and was promptly followed by an announcement from State Senator L. Harold Sothoron, a commission member, that he will introduce a bill to accomplish this.

Sothoron told reporters he would submit a bill at this year's session, if possible, which would:

1. Create a State-wide Authority to issue bonds. Such an agency would probably secure a more favorable interest charge than individual communities.

2. The Authority would make self-liquidating loans to towns to be repaid by charges on sewage and water facilities.

Since the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission operating in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties in Maryland, already has authority to issue bonds, Senator Sothoron said he doubted nearby Washington counties would be affected by the proposal.

In another resolution, the Interstate Commerce Commission praised the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission's recent efforts to end pollution of the Anacostia River. The Potomac group also voted to ask the United States Public Health Service to make two surveys of the river—one on the lower Potomac to study water quality and the other on the upper Potomac on damages from industrial waste, cost of remedying and benefits resulting from such action.

The Health Service already has plans for an industrial waste survey on the upper Potomac and the proposed economic study would supplement this.

The Interstate Commission expanded its activities by adding a wildlife and recreation committee to its standing groups. The committee includes Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.); Harold Leich, member of the program planning staff of the United States Civil Service Commission; Raymond Eaton, vice president, American Red Cross; Dr. William B. Holton, inorganic chemist, Atomic Energy Commission; Horace Walker, boating columnist of The Washington Post and executive secretary of the Marine Trade Association; and Bill Leetch, outdoor columnist for the Washington Star.

Kemp, District Director of Sanitary Engineering, said additional members will be named shortly.

G. R. Wadleigh, 29, Vice-Consul, Dies

George Remey Wadleigh, 29, third secretary and vice-consul in the United States Embassy at Lisbon, died early yesterday from encephalomyelitis, a form of sleeping sickness, the State Department reported.

Mr. Wadleigh, a native of Washington, had been transferred to Lisbon last month after two years as vice-consul in Bordeaux, France. His wife, Mrs. Josephine Kidder Wadleigh, and the three children were still residing in Bordeaux, the Department said.

The career diplomat was taken ill with a sore throat Monday, and taken to a Lisbon hospital the next day. His condition became grave on Thursday and he was placed in an iron lung. He died yesterday at 5:30 a. m.

Surviving are his wife; three children, Mary R., 3 years, David K., 21 months and George D., 2 months; his mother, Mrs. John Winthrop Wadleigh of Jamestown, R. I., a brother, Commander John Wadleigh, USN; an aunt, Miss Angelica G. Remey, 2102 Connecticut ave. nw.; two uncles, Charles Mason Remey, 2440 Massachusetts ave. nw. and John T. Remey of New York.

The parents of Mrs. Wadleigh, Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Kidder of Concord, Mass., left by plane last night for Bordeaux to bring back the family.

Mr. Wadleigh was educated at the St. Georges School in Rhode Island and at Harvard. He served overseas in the Navy as a lieutenant from 1942 to 1946. From 1946 to 1947, he was on the staff of the Foreign Liquidation Commissioner and entered State Department in September 1947.

His first overseas post was in Bordeaux as vice-consul starting in December, 1947.

Film Veteran

John Stahl, Producer, Dead at 63

Hollywood, Jan. 13 (AP).—John M. Stahl, one of Hollywood's top producers and directors, died last night of a heart attack.

The veteran director — he started in 1914—had been in Hollywood Presbyterian Hospital since New Year's Day with a heart condition. He had also contracted pneumonia but had been believed improving when death came. He would have been 64 on January 21.

In the early days of the movies, he was noted for his treatment of topical subjects. Nearly all of his early movies were based on headlines of the day.

Some of his greatest triumphs came in the early days of the talkies when he directed "Imitation of Life," "Seed," "Back Street," and "Only Yesterday," which introduced Margaret Sullavan to the screen.

He produced and directed "Magnificent Obession' and "Parnell."

In later years his "Leave Her To Heaven" won an Academy nomination for Gene Tierney and "Keys to the Kingdom" brought the spotlight on Gregory Peck.

He was associated for many years with Louis B. Mayer, originally at First National and later at the founding of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He also was with Universal, later with his own company Tiffany-Stahl.

E. Winfield Groff

E. Winfield Groff, 75, of Warwick ave., Fairfax, Va., died Thursday at Arlington Hospital. He was a former Fairfax funeral director who retired because of ill health in 1946.

Born in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, he attended schools in Pennsylvania and Washington, taking post graduate courses at the Barnes School of Embalming of Chicago.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Bertha Myers Groff, and a daughter, Mrs. Florence Groff Daum of Fairfax.

Funeral services will be held at the Everly Funeral Home, Fairfax Sunday at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Chestnut Grove Cemetery, Herndon, Va.

New Alexandria Citizens

The New Alexandria Citizens Association, after hearing a speech by Mt. Vernon District Supervisor Arthur I. Shaffer last night opposing annexing of any Fairfax County land by Alexandria, voted to oppose any move along this line.

The group, meeting at Bellview Market, Potomac and H sts., New Alexandria, went on record as backing the speaker's proposal that the people in the area affected be polled before any move is made.

Shaffer told the members that Fairfax County would lose much revenue if the annexation took place, while the city of Alexandria would take on a further financial burden which it could ill afford of providing police and fire protection. Warren L. Granger, the president, presided.

Citizens Unit Opposes Bill's Dual Voting

The Washingtonians last night voted to oppose the dual voting and congressional veto provisions of the Kefauver home rule bill.

The dual voting provision would allow District residents who have voting privileges in their home States to vote here. Under the Kefauver bill, joint action of both houses of Congress could kill a bill passed by the District city council.

The association opposed the Neely resolution providing for national representation for the District. The group endorsed the principal but decided that the Neely resolution would not bring true national representation to the District.

Meeting at 1914 Connecticut ave. nw., the Washingtonians also voted to oppose a transit fare increase at this time; and voted to endorse the Sasscer mutual aid and area commission bills.

The group proposed that the new South Capitol Street Bridge be named for the late Hugh T. Taggart, a former special assistant attorney general here, whose legal efforts helped acquire large recreational areas for the District. Taggart, who died in 1915, was the father of Washingtonian's president, Miss Etta L. Taggart.

Weather Man Turns on Heat Again Today

Take off those overcoats today, boys and girls, and get ready for near-summer weather. Uncle Sam's man at the Weather Bureau forecasts a high today in the 60's, clouds, and a chance of showers.

Even if it does get in the high 60's it won't be a record. Back in 1932, January 14 showed a temperature of 76, and the next day was the all-time high for January, 77.

As Washington expected balmy weather from a tropical air mass moving northward, the rest of the country was not so fortunate. A storm of unprecendented violence moved into the Pacific Coast, with winds above 60 miles per hour, snow, sleet, and freezing weather.

The bad weather fogged in LaGuardia and Idlewild Airports at New York and hampered operations at Newark, N. J. As a result, several dozen flights in and out of Washington were canceled yesterday. Operations resumed at nearly full scale about 8 p. m. Some flights from other points were affected, airport authorities here said and two overseas flights by KLM (Royal Dutch) Airlines destined for New York finally landed at Washington.

In the Middle West rains continued, swelling rivers already on the verge of overflowing their banks. The Ohio River menaced towns toward its mouth, particularly in southern Illinois. At Vincennes, Ind., the Wabash River began to recede a bit, but there was no assurance it would not rise again and flood out hundreds of residents.

At Rosiclare, Ill., the Ohio completely inundated the main street, and 60 families were evacuated. In Smithland, Ky., all business houses were emptied, and at Paducah, Ky., special floodwall gates were erected. Other small communities on both sides of the river were flooded.

No Foul Play Seen in Death Of Woman

Alexandria police yesterday closed their investigation into the death of Mrs. Edith Dix, 31, who was found nude and unconscious on December 30 at 214½ Queen st., Alexandria.

The woman who, according to police, had a long record of arrests for drunkenness and vagrancy died the next day in Alexandria Hospital.

After an autopsy, Dr. John A. Sims, city coroner, said death resulted from a cerebral hemorrhage which could have been caused by a blow on the head. However, police said yesterday they have been unable to find any evidence of foul play.

They said Mrs. Dix was arrested for drunkenness a short time before Christmas, at which time she bore marks indicating she had been in a fight. When she died, police said, the old marks still showed, but there were no new ones.

Carl Blackwell, 62, of the Queen street address, who was questioned in connection with the death, was released Thursday.

Levi David

The funeral of Levi David, Washington attorney, will be held at Gawlers funeral home on Sunday, at 2 p. m. Burial will take place at the Washington Hebrew Congregation Cemetery.

Mr. David

Mr. David died Thursday in Takoma Park, Md. He was a member of the District and Maryland bars and of the District Bar Association. He had practiced here for 51 years since graduating in 1898 from the Georgetown University Law School. Mr. David resided at 4316 28th pl., Mount Rainier, Md.

Honorary pallbearers representing the District Bar Association chosen yesterday were: Joseph A. Ashi, M. Edward Buckley, Peter G. Chaconas, John A. K. Donovan, Landon G. Dowdy, Abe M. Goldstein, Josiah Lyman, Emmett L. Sheehan, Albert A. Stern and Leon Tobriner.

Dr. H. H. Trout, Sr.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 13 (AP).—Dr. Hugh Henry Trout, sr., 72, prominent surgeon, founder and president of the board of Jefferson Hospital, died early this morning of coronary thrombosis at his home here.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Alice Green Trout; two daughters and three sons: Mrs. Herman Bolster of Roanoke County, Miss Alice Trout, Dr. Hugh H. Trout, jr., and Dr. Philip Cocke Trout, all of Roanoke, and Albert Henry Trout, University of Virginia; a brother, P. H. Trout, and a sister, Mrs. Waller Staples, both of Roanoke.

At the time of his death he was a member of the board of visitors at the University of Virginia and the Virginia Episcopal Seminary at Alexandria.

Sergt. R. I. Payne

Funeral services for Sergt. Russell I. Payne of Camp Springs, Md., who was killed in World War II when his plane crashed in Czechoslovakia on August 29, 1944, will be held at 1 p. m. Saturday at the Ritchie Bros. funeral home, Upper Marlboro, Md. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Born and educated in Camp Springs, Sergeant Payne was the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Lloyd Payne.

He is also survived by his daughter, Shirley Marie Payne, 5; four brothers, James A., Lloyd W., Arthur A. and Francis V. Payne; and a sister, Mrs. Louise Smith.

Dr. Bullock Dies in Car of Heart Attack

Dr. John H. Bullock, 56, collapsed and died of a heart attack yesterday as he was parking his car near his office at 766 Rock Creek Church rd. nw. He had just completed a tonsilectomy at Garfield Hospital.

Dr. Bullock

Police said Dr. Bullock's car hit a parked car as he was stricken. Friction from the spinning wheels of his car started a small fire which firemen quickly extinguished.

Dr. Bullock, who lived at 1301 Ingraham st. nw., was pronounced dead at 11 a. m. by an Emergency Hospital ambulance doctor.

Born on a farm in Granville County, N. C., Dr. Bullock was educated at Trinity College, Durham, N. C. (now Duke University), and took his medical training at the Medical College of Richmond, Va.

He began his practice in Washington after serving as a medical officer with the rank of lieutenant in World War I. He was a Mason, Shriner and a member of the District Medical Society.

Dr. Bullock leaves his wife, Mrs. Louise Bullock; a daughter, Mary Jacqueline Bullock, a senior at Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla., and two sisters, Mrs. W. N. Thomas and Mrs. John Ray Watkins, both of Oxford, N. C.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. Sunday at the Chevy Chase Funeral Home, 5103 Wisconsin ave. nw. Burial will be at 11 a. m. Monday in Oxford.

George H. Emerson

Baltimore, Jan. 13 (AP).—George H. Emerson, retired chief of motive power and equipment for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and developer of the first air-conditioned coach, died in Union Memorial Hospital last night. He was 80.

Born at St. Paul, Minn., August 12, 1869, Emerson's railroad career extended through nearly 60 years. After service in World War I during which he became a colonel, Emerson joined the B & O in 1920.

While with that railroad—he retired in 1941—Emerson had charge of the design and construction of the B. & O.'s crack trains, the Royal Blue and the Abraham Lincoln.

Edward H. Bell

San Francisco, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—Edward H. Bell, vice president in charge of the Pacific division of the American Can Co. died here today at his home after a brief illness. He was 61.

Surviving are his widow, the former Claire Sullivan of Chicago; a daughter, Mrs. Edgar T. Zook jr., San Francisco; a brother, W. C. Bell, New Haven, Conn.; two sisters, Mrs. Bentley Byrd, Norfolk, Va., and Mrs. Kenneth Black, Richmond, Va.

Wide Latitude for Hats: A Veil, Apple or Nearly Anything That's Fetching

By Peggy Preston

New York, N. Y., Jan. 13.—Little hats, big hats, hats that are veils and veils that are hats. Anything, my lady, that strikes your fancy. That's what you can put on your head this spring.

Put an apple on your Milan straw—a la Walter Florell or sew up a bonnet of wrapping cord like John-Frederics'. Better still, just wear one of Sally Victor's "Kiss Me" veils, and hope it lives up to its name.

MISS PRESTON

Actually your hat can take almost any shape or form. It can be a cartwheel (minus the crown), or a cap with a leprechaun peak at the top. If the Gibson Girl is still your ideal you can pick a straw sailor, but keep it on the level. Perch it straight on the crown, and secure it with a face veil tied at the back of the head.

And, if you are a patron of the "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" school you may have a cloche. But not a deep one, because that is not in keeping with the spirit of the 1950 headgear. Today's cloches have rules of their own which permit them to hug one ear, not two, and their crowns are sleek, fitted and neat.

For if there is one feature that dominates this varied, topsy-turvy millinery picture for spring, it is this shallow, spare effect. Crowns of sailors are sometimes no more than an inch and a half high. In other types of hats the crown almost disappears. If the trend continues we'll be wearing hats with elastic bands in back to hold them on. Our old L-85 Channeaux will be right in the swim again.

But right now, in January, hats are still firm on the head. They fit well and have a minimum of trimming.

John-Frederics' jaunty little "Can-Can" hats, worn on the crest of the head, with an unexpected bustle back.

Sally Victor's colorful bonnet with the forward jutting brim that throws a kind shadow over the face.

Mr. John's stark little derby.

Peg Fischer's delectable little evening hat with cascades of black lacy-patterned net down one side.

Lenesta's "Catcher's Mask" veil, which he draws into a corsage at the front of a hat.

Hattie Carnegie's fresh and feminine version of the "little" hat, literally sprinkled with brain and rhinestones.

The "Sou'wester" sweep in back to beautiful Milans and felts: jewels and rosebuds applied to veiling: pie-crust edges to little sailors.

Best of all, we like the variety. There is a hat for every hair-do, and every face: brims that hide an ugly hairline at the nape of the neck rise to show-off a pretty one.

Earrings that dingle and dangle. For evening they may touch the shoulder, provided your ear lobe can stand the strain.

Handbags and hats of ribbon. These look as though a girl might be able to make a set for herself if she is handy with a needle.

One long rope of pearls as a salute to the flapper. But a crescent choker as well, to circle the throat. And, for something quite new, a necklace that fades away in back, the design concentrated at the front.

Big scarfs, tied like fichus to cover bare shoulders. Another huge one to float from a suit pocket.

ACCESSORY NOTATIONS FOR SPRING:

Pique vests or collar and cuff sets to match with a navy or black dress or suit.

Fashion Models' Scholarship Offered

Teen-age girls, junior misses, and gray-haired matrons are all invited to compete for scholarships to the School of Fashion Modeling at Southeastern University, Washington.

Entry blanks will be available after January 16 on the second floor of Lansburgh's Department Store, which is sponsoring the contest. And graduates of Southeastern will be on hand to answer the contestants' questions.

The school is directed by Mrs. Gladstone Williams, who stages the weekly fashion shows at Raleigh and Statler Hotels.

Mme. Erkin Gives Musicale

By Elizabeth Maguire

MADAME ERKIN, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, gave a musicale at the embassy yesterday for a small group of friends. Mrs. Thomas Burke, Chilean-born concert artist, played the piano, and the ambassadress sang. A high soprano, Mme. Erkin has a beautiful voice, and her accompanying pianist, Mrs. Burke, is a favorite in Washington society.

Those who attended the musical were Mme. Van Kleffens, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador; Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, Mrs. Gustav Stewart, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Mrs. Harold Burton, Mrs. Charles Brannan, Mrs. Robert Freer, Mrs. English Gordon, Mrs. Clifton Bledsoe Cates, Mrs. Frances Bolton and Mrs. Cornelius Bretsch

Also, Mrs. Edwin C. Wilson, Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Selim Albatross, wife of the Assistant Naval Attache of the Turkish Embassy, and Mme. Refik Tulga, wife of the Turkish Military Attache.

Odd Headdress Worn

THE WALTZ GROUP met again at the Sulgrave Club last evening, and this time it was a bal de tete. Everyone was asked to wear a headdress depicting a favorite superstition or hated bete noir. There were high hats with black cats, broken mirrors, blonde wigs, toy ladders, airplanes, and so forth.

Those entertaining at dinners beforehand included Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Foote, Mrs. Sigourney Thayer, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Palms, jr., and Mrs. J. Burke Wilkinson.

Guests at the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Lee included Mr. and Mrs. William Youngman of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Swett of Baltimore, Mr. and Mrs. DeForest Van Slyck, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Bragdon, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Nitze, Mr. and Mrs. Noel Macy, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Porter, Harry Covington and Mr. and Mrs. Alec Hawes.

High-ranking Marine officers who are in Washington this week attending Selection Board meetings were entertained yesterday afternoon at a cocktail party given by the Commandant of the Marine Corps, Gen. Clifton Bledsoe Cates, and Mrs. Cates at the Commandants' House, Marine Barracks. About 90 guests were received.

A luncheon was given yesterday by the Mexican Ambassador, Rafael de la Colina, for J. Reveley, former chief of the division of Mexican Affairs of the State Department; Tomas G. Mann, chief of the office of Meso-American Affairs; A. Rubatton, counselor of the embassy; Rafael Nieto, and Ivan White.

The Assistant Director of the Bank of Mexico and Senora de Gomez were among those who attended a luncheon Thursday at La Salle du Bois given by the former Secretary of the Treasury of Mexico, Eduardo Suarez and Senora de Suarez, who are leaving Washington today after several days visit. Others who attended the luncheon were the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Colina and the First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Saenz.

Lady Medhurst, wife of the head of the Air Force Staff, British Joint Services Mission, was entertained yesterday at a farewell luncheon given by Mrs. Brian Schofield. Sir Charles and Lady Medhurst are sailing soon for England.

Scholarship Openings to Be Detailed

By Genevieve Reynolds

Twenty-six alumnae club presidents and scholarship chairmen, plus three college heads of admission will be present when the Associated Alumnae Clubs of Washington meet, Monday at 8 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Neville Miller, 4427 Garfield st. All will confer with college counselors from the greater Washington Secondary Schools.

Purpose of the gathering is to work out details of scholarships available to young women in this area. The trio of admission deans will be Miss Mary E. Chase of Wellesley, Miss Harriet Newhall of Mount Holyoke and Miss Bernice Lill of Sweet Briar.

The Associated Alumnae Clubs of Washington, composed of graduates of 26 colleges, has prepared a chart for high schools showing entrance requirements, scholarships, grants-in-aid, loans and employment available to prospective college students.

Mrs. Neville Miller is president of the club. Other officers include Miss Elaine Lownquest, vice president; Mrs. Elwyn J. Rowell, secretary, and Miss Lois Hendrick, treasurer.

Pen Women Hear Author

Miss Bess Furman, author of "Washington By-Line," spoke yesterday at luncheon meeting of the Alexandria Branch, League of American Pen Women, held at the George Washington Club. Mrs. Henrietta Nesbitt, author of "White House Diary," introduced the speaker. Mrs. Lenore Keefer presided.

With the State Societies

Black Tie Invades State Societies

By Nicha Souré

BLACK-TIE AFFAIRS have invaded the State societies! First on the list is the West Virginia State Society dinner tonight, where over 300 West Virginians will gather at the Mayflower Hotel to honor the Mountaineer State's foremost citizen, Defense Secretary Louis Johnson.

Gov. Okey Patteson of West Virginia and Mrs. Patteson will head a large delegation of State officials coming to Washington for the banquet. The official delegation will include the State's Congressmen. The banquet will be held in the Sapphire Room preceded by a reception in the East Room.

Honor guests at the banquet will include the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Francis Matthews, the Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. W. Stuart Symington, the Assistant Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Paul Griffith, the Assistant Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Mark Leva, the Assistant Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Wilfred J. McNeil, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Mrs. Omar Bradley, Brig. Gen. Louis Renfrow and Mrs. Renfrow.

Following the dinner, the West Virginians will trek over to the Shoreham Hotel for the annual congressional dance in the new ballroom. Dancing will be to the music of Dave McWilliams' orchestra.

TEXAS' black-tie dinner will be in the main ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel on January 20 at 8 p. m.

The dinner will be in honor of Justice Tom Clark, the first Texan to be named to the Supreme Court of the United States. Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn will be master of ceremonies, and guests of honor will include members of the Cabinet and Supreme Court and their wives. Chief Justice Fred Vinson will be principal speaker.

For information about the society or the dinner, call Dave Botter, vice president, at National 5033.

ANOTHER State society which has joined the "dinner-dance" group is Tennessee. On January 21, the Volunteer Staters will dine and dance at the Shoreham Hotel at 7:30 p. m. Mrs. Griffith Foskett, at Michigan 5009, is in charge of reservations.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY is the first of the Maryland counties to be honored by the Maryland State Society at a dance on January 21 in the Shoreham Hotel.

A reception will be held from 9:30 to 10 p. m., to be followed by dancing to the music of Dave McWilliams' orchestra.

NEBRASKANS in Washington will have an opportunity to get reacquainted with some of the products of their home State at their State Society party on Saturday, January 21.

Businessmen and industrialists of the Cornhusker State are sending in items of merchandise to be distributed at the party, according to Clifford Sandahl, society president.

Joining with the society at its University Night party will be members of the University of Nebraska Alumni Club of Washington. They will meet first for dinner at 7 p. m. at 1914 Connecticut ave. nw. Dr. John D. Clark, economic adviser to President Truman and former Nebraskan, will be guest speaker at the banquet.

The dance will be from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m. in the Continental Room of the Wardman Park Hotel with music by Jack Morton's orchestra.

THE lumberjack party of the Minnesota State Society will be held at 9:30 tonight in the Wardman Park Hotel. Dr. Ivan Booker will do the calling for the square dancing and Barnee Lowe will provide both sweet and hot music for ballroom dancing.

THE Vermont Association will hold its annual congressional reception from 9 p. m. to midnight, January 21, at the Washington Club, 1701 K st. nw.

THE Kentucky Society of Washington will begin its thirty-sixth year of activity on Friday, January 20, when it holds a reception and dance at the Shoreham Hotel in honor of members of the Blue Grass congressional delegation.

South Trimble, jr., president of the Kentucky group, has named former Ambassador Emmet O'Neil chairman of the reception committee. He will be assisted by A. O. Stanley, Judge David Kincheloe, Maurice Thatcher and John Sherman Cooper.

Members of the Kentucky congressional delegation who will be honored include Senator Virgil Chapman, Senator Garrett L. Withers, Representative Noble Gregory, Representative John Whitaker, Representative Thurston Morton, Representative Frank Cheif, Representative Brent Spence, Representative Thomas Underwood, Representative Carl Perkins, Representative Joe Bates and Representative James Golden.

Mr. Trimble announced that honorary vice presidents of the society will include Vice President Barkley, Chief Justice Fred Vinson, Senator Withers, Senator Chapman and John Sherman Cooper, American delegate to the United Nations.

NORTH CAROLINIANS are out and about this week alerting all other Tar Heels in Washington!

Reason for all the stir is the "Turn of the Century" dance series which the North Carolina Society has planned for the coming season as a part of its Golden Jubilee celebration.

To highlight the series, the dance committee is planning a gay ball for the early spring at which costumes of the period—with leg-o'-mutton sleeves and fluffy trains—will be the order of the day.

At its dance on Saturday, January 21, the society will hold its annual celebration for newlywed Tar Heels. The dance will be in the large ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel at 10 p. m., with Dave McWilliams' orchestra furnishing music for dancing.

At the intermission, North Carolinians who have been married since January 1, 1949, will celebrate again by cutting a huge wedding cake. Young marrieds should send their names to Mrs. Troy McKinney (ORdway 6341), chairman of the committee on arrangements.

North Carolinians may obtain application forms for membership from the society's secretary, Mrs. Stella O. Miller, 1101 House Office Building, or from the president of the society, John K. Slear, 1505 House Office Building. Guest tickets will be available at the door the night of the dance.

THE Pennsylvania State Society will dance to the music of Dave McWilliams' orchestra on Friday, January 20. The dance will be from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m. in the West Ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel.

Marshalls Due To Visit Annual Antiques Show

George P. Marshall, president of the Washington Redskins, and Mrs. Marshall (the former Corinne Griffith) will be among those turning out for the seventh Washington Antiques Exposition to be held in the ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, January 16, 17 and 18.

The Marshalls have acquired an old home in Georgetown that they are furnishing with antiques.

About Classes in Woodworking

I'd like to know if there is any club or school that has classes in woodworking or where, for a nominal fee, one may use woodworking tools in the evenings and on weekends? I've heard of such a club in Virginia which is open only to residents of that community, but is there a similar place in Washington? H. W.

New classes in woodworking will start at Montgomery Blair High School, Dale drive and Wayne ave. in Silver Spring, in about two weeks. These classes meet Monday and Wednesday from 7 to 10 p. m. or Tuesday and Thursday, 7 to 10 p. m. The course runs for 16 three-hour classes and the registration fee for residents and nonresidents alike is $2.50, with materials extra.

Since woodworking courses are so popular (the adult courses in the District Evening School are all full and there is a waiting list for next semester), I suggest you register for the course right away. Registration takes place at the school.

I know of no place where woodworking tools may be used for a fee. As a matter of fact, the only shop I've heard of which operated on that basis has recently changed to another operation policy. This was a shop in Virginia and may be the one to which you refer.

I, like many other married girls, would like to keep or make use of the wedding dolls that appeared on our wedding cake. I have tried everywhere for a glass top to fit over the dolls, but bakeries who specialize in wedding cakes don't carry them. I would appreciate it very much if you could give me an idea of where I could find a store that carries such items. C. S.

I haven't been able to find any store which sells glass domes, but you could have a clear plastic one made to your measurements. Several of the firms listed under "Plastics" in the yellow pages of the telephone book do this sort of work.

Another less expensive idea is to cover the dolls with a clear oblong plastic box such as florists use for corsages. These come in varying sizes and I am told that some florists will sell them separately.

Can you give me the name of a book that lists the 48 State flowers, State birds, and State nicknames? R. G.

The World Almanac and Book of Facts published by the New York World-Telegram contains the names of the State flowers and nicknames, but there is no mention of State birds. You can obtain a copy for $1 at bookstores and some newsstands or you could see a copy at your nearby library.

I would like a recipe for sweet potatoes with lemon sauce. Do you have one? R. G.

I'm sorry, I do not seem to have that recipe, but perhaps you would be interested in trying this very easy method of preparing sweet potatoes with orange sauce:

Boil 4 medium-sized, peeled sweet potatoes in salted water until just tender. Drain. Now, place in a frying pan 4 tablespoons of butter or margarine and ½ to ¾ cup of orange marmalade. (There should be enough sauce when marmalade is melted to just cover the bottom of the pan.) Heat to melt butter and liquefy marmalade. Put potatoes into sauce, heating slowly until potatoes are completely coated and lightly browned. Turn potatoes frequently.

I wish to thank I. G. K. of Arlington, E. R. B. and C. L. J. of Washington, and W. S. K. of Chevy Chase, who have sent us information on whole wheat and white bread.

I will be moving into a new house on Februrary 1 and would appreciate your help on the following: What is the proper way to treat and care for asphalt tile floors and parquet floors? I will have one full wall of my living room composed of brick. Does this require any special care or treatment? What color paint would you recommend for my living-dining room? I have a kelly green sofa, a Chinese red on red easy chair and a lady's chair of grey and red. I have a mahogany table. Would additional wood pieces in light wood be appropriate? The room has a southeastern exposure.

The principal thing to remember in caring for asphalt tile is that oil in any form is destructive to it. When it is necessary to clean asphalt floors, wash them with a mild soap and then rinse thoroughly to remove all traces of soap. To further avoid oils, use only water emulsion waxes—not paste wax.

If at any time oil is spilled on the floor, it should be immediately and thoroughly wiped up to avoid softening and damaging the tile. As with other types of floors, asphalt tile will give better wear and look new longer if it is kept constantly protected with wax.

Parquet floors should also be protected at all times with a well rubbed layer of wax. When soil appears in the heavy wear areas, it can be easily taken up by wiping with cleaning and polishing wax before a fresh coat of paste wax is applied.

Aside from brushing occasionally to remove all dust, brick does not require special attention. If you wish to give the bricks a deeper, richer color you could apply a coat of water emulsion wax or linseed oil. The wax or oil will also help to seal the surface against soil.

With kelly green and red, I'd suggest light green or grey walls. Vivid colors go beautifully with light woods. Because of this, they would be an especially happy choice for the additional pieces in your living room.

I would like to know where I can send my little daughter's doll's head to be fixed. The bridge that holds the eyes has broken and needs repairing. I would appreciate this information and also the approximate cost. N. M.

There is a doll hospital located at 1009 19th st. nw., Washington, which repairs doll heads. The charge is about $1.50 for setting the eyes and about $2 if a new bridge is necessary.

My husband brought me a beautiful pair of alligator shoes from Cuba. They are the right length, but unfortunately too wide to fit well. Where can I have these recut to fit? Is there a shoe clinic here that does such remodeling? J. F.

There are several firms listed under "Shoes—repairing" in the yellow pages of the telephone book which list changing shoe widths among their services.

Where in the city can I get remnants of plastic leather to cover a large cheese box which can then be used as a hassock or sewing box? F. B. J.

I haven't been able to find a place which sells remnants, but several of the department stores sell plastic leather by the yard in their drapery departments. It comes in several lovely colors.

$55,000 Damages Awarded Woman Shot by 'Friend'

A District Court jury yesterday awarded $55,000 damages to a woman taxicab driver who was shot in each hip by her estranged boy friend.

She is Louise Douse, of 1406 5th st. nw. The verdict was against James L. Smith, 36, now serving a three to nine year prison sentence for shooting Miss Douse. He did not contest the suit.

According to the plaintiff, when she told Smith she would have no more to do with him he broke into her room and drew his pistol. While she grappled with him, she said, she slipped to the floor. It was then, according to her testimony, that he fired twice.

She said she must wear crutches and no longer can drive the taxi.

Appeals Court Refuses Meyers' Freedom Bid

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 13 (U.P.). The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals today turned down former Air Force Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers' bid for freedom from Federal prison.

Meyers is serving 20 months to five years for subornation of perjury before a congressional committee in an investigation of war contract awards.

The Appeals Court upheld an earlier ruling of the United States District Court of Eastern Virginia, which had turned down a request of a writ of habeas corpus for Meyers.

One on the Aisle—

Plight of the Shy Is Unusual Theme

By Richard L. Coe

"THE HASTY HEART," at the Warner, is a finely acted story about the inability of the shy to communicate with their fellows.

A novel theme, it has been handled with sympathetic effect and introduces a young actor who makes the most of a telling role, Richard Todd.

The film is from John Patrick's successful stage play, wherein Richard Basehart, now of the screen, scored in Todd's role. The setting is a military hospital in Burma at the war's end; the characters are soldiers from all parts of the English-speaking world.

A Scot corporal joins a Yank, a Tommy, a Kiwi, an Aussie and a Basuto in their ward. Before his arrival, there's been good-natured fun in the place, but he's a dour fellow who resents any kindnesses to him. The men have been told that though he seems to be well, he is fated to die within a few weeks; at the C. O.'s instance, they attempt to draw him out of his suspicious shell. Gradually they do so, giving him a birthday party and full regimental kilt regalia, for which he's always yearned but has refused to buy with money he's saving for a farm in Scotland.

The boy thaws out happily under the men's patient persuasion, but withdraws more than ever when he learns that they know he is to die. A Canadian nurse has prodded the men in their kindnesses and has even promised to marry the lad. Realizing their sympathy, the Scot withdraws to his loneliness.

Ultimately the truth dawns on the fellow that all men are lonely and that by helping one another with patience and understanding, all human beings also help themselves.

American Model in England

Such a theme as this has an inherent tenderness and Ranald MacDougall's screen play takes care to emphasize this appeal. The film lacks a good deal of the humor one found in the play, sacrificing a good deal of the men's relationships to emphasizing the plight of the lonely Scot. But the shift in emphasis also has the value of cutting away a well-worked device in character study.

The playing is splendid, with Todd making a firm impression as the Scot. It will be interesting to see what the future holds for this British actor; whether his juicy, sympathetic role is a one-shot characterization or one in a gallery of portraits.

Vincent Sherman directed the production in England with Ronald Reagan as Yank and Patricia Neal as the nurse, on hand from Hollywood. Ralph Michael, seen on the National stage several years ago in Martha Gellhorn's play about war correspondents, plays the Kiwi and Orlando Martins is especially effective as the Basuto who can speak only one word of English, his nickname, "Blossom."

All told, Warners have done a fine job in telling this unusual and moving story.

IT WILL BE "Campaign Night" at the Trans-Lux Theater next Thursday for the Metropolitan Police Boys Club, with an advance showing of Samuel Goldwyn's latest, "My Foolish Heart." . . . All money taken in will go to the Boys Club drive . . . Starting Monday noon there'll be a booth in the T-L lobby where tickets may be had in the form of membership of the MPBC . . . Starting at one buck, going up as high as you care to donate for membership . . .

'THE HASTY HEART.' Warner Brothers release produced in England. Screen play by Ranald MacDougall. From the stage play by John Patrick. Photographed by Wilkie Cooper. Directed by Vincent Sherman. At the Warner.

MONEY, oddly enough, is not what is needed for ANTA to lease the Belasco . . . What is needed is a rapid working out of the lease of officials of the American National Theater and Academy and of the Public Building Administration . . . It is good to find so many interested in pushing rebirth here of a live theater, but monetary donations are not a factor . . . Monday in New York, ANTA's board members will consider the latest terms put forward by the Government agency . . . One matter holding up things is the need to find space for the files and officials now using the theater . . . A solid push, not mazuma, is what's needed.

JAY GORNEY, composer of "Touch and Go," which began life at Catholic University as "Thank You, Just Looking" and is now past its 100th performance at New York's Broadhurst Theater, in town yesterday plugging for the March of Dimes . . . With him was Decca Songstress Dorothy Carless, one of England's wartime chantootsies and a gal who trouped out to the Allied forces under ENSA . . . The boys loved Dorothy in the MEF.

OPEN READINGS will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock for Bernard Shaw's "You Never Can Tell" by the George'own Studio Gallery's Playbox Theater . . . This group's headquarters is at 2700 Q st. nw., with an entrance on 27th st. . . . It's planned to have a week's run for this, one of Shaw's "pleasant" plays, with Margaret Stallings as director and Dorothy Looker as assistant director . . . The two were identified with the 1949 Gadsby's Tavern revival of the Alexandria Little Theater.

Phone Revenue Raise Demand Held Too High

Richmond, Va., Jan. 13 (AP).—The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. needs additional gross revenues of only $782,433 instead of the nearly four million dollars it is seeking in rate increase rates, the State Coropration Commission was told today.

The testimony came from Charles C. Drummond, chief accountant for the SCC, which is conducting the rate hearing.

Drummond's figures were based on a revision of the company's capital structure which he recommended to the commission yesterday. He also used a method of figuring capital investment which was different from that employed by the company.

On this basis, and with "adjustments" made by the commission's accounting division staff, the company needs additional net earnings of only one fifth of what it is seeking in additional revenue, Drummond testified.

The hearing will be continued Monday and Tuesday.

Maryland PSC Winds Up Hearing on Phone Rates

Baltimore, Jan. 13 (AP).—Testimony in the protracted Public Service Commission hearings on a proposal to increase Maryland telephone rates were concluded today. The commission set February 13 for presentation of closing arguments and the filing of briefs.

As the curtain fell, Richard Case, special counsel retained by the State to fight the permanent rate increase requested by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., reported the city of Cumberland had passed a resolution opposing the rise. PSC Chairman John H. Hessey said the resolution would be accepted in evidence.

Masked Men Flog Preacher For 'Mingling'

Atlanta, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—A preacher reported today that a masked group of white men kidnaped and beat him in south Georgia last night after he defied warnings not to mingle with Negroes.

His face bloodied and bruised, the Rev. Michael Picardi, 58, a Pentecostal minister from Columbus, Ohio, said he was preaching to about half a dozen Negroes in a Negro church near Cairo, Ga., when five white men, their features hidden by bandanas, snatched him away.

He was pushed into a car, Picardi said, and as they bounced along dirt roads his abductors beat him on the head and body with pistol and shotgun butts. Finally they took him back to the church where his own car was parked. Picardi said, and told him: "Get out of town; you've got 30 minutes."

Picardi drove 25 miles to Thomasville and went to bed for a few hours, then drove 200 miles to Atlanta to report the beating to newspapermen.

Israel Reported Set to Accept Jerusalem Plan

Tel Aviv, Israel, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Israeli Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion has decided to support a modified United Nations plan to internationalize Jerusalem, well-informed sources said today.

Ben-Gurion had intended to oppose the plan. But informants said he changed his mind because he believes acceptance would strengthen Israel in its peace talks with Hashemite Jordan. The peace talks, it is understood, have been progressing rapidly since the new year after a long deadlock.

The U. N. internationalization plan, with modifications, is to be considered sometime during a meeting of the trusteeship council which starts in Geneva, Switzerland, next Thursday.

It is believed that Roger Garreau, president of the council, will delay presentation of the modified plan in hope that Israel and Jordan may meantime make more progress in their talks.

Knights Templar Banquet Tonight

Washington Commandery No. 1, Knights Templar, will hold a banquet tonight at the Shoreham Hotel in observance of the 125th anniversary of the founding of Templary in the District.

Guest speaker will be the Rev. Dr. Edgar C. Powers of Baltimore, secretary of the Maryland division of the American Bible Society.

Choir Sing Set

The Baltimore Boys Choir will sing at 4:30 p. m. Sunday at the Metropolitan A.M.E. Church, 1518 M st. nw., in a program sponsored by the Phyllis Wheatley YWCA.

Job Given Friend of Vaughan; Protest Aroused in Missouri

NYHT News Service

Democratic leaders in President Truman's home State have filed an angry protest with the national committee as a result of the selection of a former colleague of Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, the President's military aide, as district census supervisor.

The supervisor, they contend, was appointed in disregard of their unanimous recommendations and after the woman who had their indorsement had been notified of her appointment by the area census supervisor.

The storm is raging over the $4600-a-year post of census supervisor for the Seventh Congressional District in Missouri.

One leader, Don O. Adamson, said yesterday his group heard the successful appointee, Mrs. Fern D. Edwards of Pierce City, Mo., was Vaughan's former secretary. The general denied this, explaining Mrs. Edwards had simply served along with him in the President's campaign headquarters when Mr. Truman was seeking reelection to the Senate in 1940.

Asked whether he was instrumental in the Edwards choice, he replied:

"No sir. That's out of my bailiwick. I had nothing to do with it."

"Did you recommend her for the job?"

"I don't remember whether I did or not; they may have asked me," he said.

Reward Lad Won For Honesty Goes To PBC Drive

A 12-year-old boy's honesty and generosity yesterday enriched the Metropolitan Police Boys Club campaign by $2.

Jimmy Mandes, of 1912 14th st. se., member of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club No. 11, in Fairlawn Field Park, Anacostia, found a pocketbook containing money, keys and valued papers.

Mrs. Fletcher Jimmy

He also found the owner's name and address—Mrs. Julia Fletcher, of 1411 S st. se.—and promptly delivered it to her.

Mrs. Fletcher offered the boy a $2 reward. Putting self-interest aside, Jimmy proposed she contribute the money to the Police Boys Club drive.

So, Mrs. Fletcher cheerfully bought an adult membership in the club, which is seeking 150,000 enrollments.

Jimmy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Mandes, is president of the sixth grade at Ketcham School.

Rosslyn Firm Found Guilty of Polluting River

The Worthington Oil Co., Rosslyn, yesterday was found guilty of polluting the Potomac River with waste products in criminal violation of a Federal statue.

The case—the first of its kind tried under Federal law—set a precedent and will lead to similar prosecutions against at least three other suspected violators, authorities said.

A District Court jury brought in the verdict before Federal Judge James W. Morris after about an hour's deliberation.

The panel, at the same time, found Vernald T. Worthington, president of the oil company, innocent of the pollution charge.

Similar prosecutions had been brought in the past under the District Code. The maximum penalty under the United States Code for polluting "navigable streams" or rivers is a $2500 fine or a year's imprisonment or both.

Since yesterday's finding was against the company only, no jail sentence may be imposed.

Prosecutor Grace Stiles presented witnesses from a number of canoe and yacht clubs who testified the oil-laden waters in the vicnity of Key Bridge had begrimed their craft.

Walter M. Sands, inspector for the District Health Department, said the waste oil flowed into the river through a pipeline the company had received permission to install for the drainage of surface water only.

Investigtaion into the charges was carried out by Pvt. Frank C. White of the Harbor Police, Pvt. Philip W. Birch of the Park Police and Sands.

No date was set for sentencing on the charge.

Man Gets Ten Days On Bad Check Charge

A 10-day jail sentence was imposed yesterday on Francis R. Kelly, 35, of 225 N. Thomas st., Arlington, on a charge of giving a bad check for $29.25 to Emmet F. Oliss, a grocer at 106 S. Wayne st., Arlington.

Associate Trial Justice Harry R. Thomas of Arlington County Court, also gave Kelly a suspended sentence of 90 days in jail on charges growing out of three other checks Kelly allegedly gave Oliss, totaling $62. Kelly pleaded guilty to the charges.

Man Who Bit Off Foe's Ear Gets 90-Day Term

A man who bit off his opponent's ear in a fight last Saturday, yesterday was sentenced to $100 fine or 90 days in jail.

The ear-biter, Howard Johnson, 1515 Swann st. nw., pleaded guilty to simple assault before Municipal Judge Armond Scott. Victim was Vincent Suber, 36, of 1319 S st. nw. Assistant United States Attorney J. Leon Williams was prosecutor.

Correction

The Washington Post yesterday described a bill by Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) as a measure to strengthen the powers of the Board of Public Welfare. The measure, in fact, would strip the Board of its administrative powers, transferring them to the District Commissioners, leaving the board as an advisory agency.

Nourse Assails Deficit-Bought 'Prosperity'

Richmond, Va., Jan. 13 (AP). President Truman's former chief economic adviser says the Fair Deal is trying to buy another year of prosperity with deficit spending.

Dr. Edwin C. Nourse, who quit last month after heading the Council of Economic Advisers for three years, said the voters should not be lulled to sleep by a "rosy song of optimism and synthetic prosperity."

Commenting on the President's reports to Congress in a speech before the Richmond Chamber of Commerce last night, the economist said:

"There is a great deal of attractive rhetoric in the reports, but a lack of detail and a lack of substance. There is beautiful language about the Nation's happy future, but there is no hard-headed analysis of how inevitable difficulties will be faced. I don't think praise for harmony and cooperation is what we need right now."

Scoring the 5½-billion-dollar deficit in the proposed 1950-51 Federal budget, Dr. Nourse said the Nation should be striving for a surplus, adding:

"I think . . . and I told the President . . . that the Administration has resorted again to inflationary shortcuts, and I think that the deliberate launching of a program for false prosperity is a grave mistake.

"And I don't think the program is either sound or progressive."

Passerby Rescues Kitten Perched in Tree for 30 Hours

Smoky, a drenched, tired but happy 5-month-old kitten was rescued last night after spending almost 30 chilly and rain-and-sleet-swept hours in a tree-perch 35 feet from the ground at 95 Sheridan st. ne.

A passing electrician, Louis Gremillion, 615 Newton pl. nw., rescued Smoky. He climbed a 20-foot ladder, shinnied the additional distance up an adjacent tree and finally placed a plank for the marooned and mournfully incoming kitten to walk along.

Smoky showed his joy by clawing his rescuer, but later was pronounced in fit condition as he lapped milk at the home of his owners, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Fuller, 87 Sheridan st. ne.

'Dry Day' Set Again

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Water Commissioner Stephen Carney today ordered another "thirsty Thursday" next week. He said he was disappointed yesterday's "dry day" did not save as much water as on December 16 when the city first went shaveless and bathless.

'This I Remember'

Mrs. Roosevelt Served Enough Tea to Float Navy

This is another installment of the serialization of "This I Remember," the nonfiction best seller in which Eleanor Roosevelt tells the story of Franklin D. Roosevelt's career, from 1924 to his death in 1945. Succeeding installments will be printed in The Washington Post through February 4.

By Eleanor Roosevelt

I ADDED some parties to the social calendar of the White House: a so-called Gridiron Widows' party and teas and a garden party for the women who held executive or administrative positions in the Government.

Every year the newspapermen invited the President to the Gridiron dinner, which men in the newspaper field consider a most important event. Women are never allowed to attend—not even the women of the press. I decided it would be fun to have an evening party for the women on the same night, not only newspaperwomen but wives of newspapermen, and Cabinet wives (since the Secretaries usually attended the Gridiron dinner with the President). We had this party every year until the war caused us to give up all entertaining purely for pleasure.

I am including here a sample of my social calendar for one week. I think you will see that a President's wife is not exactly idle.

Monday

4:00 p. m.—Tea for members of Delaware Democratic Club
4:00 p. m.—Tea for foreign diplomats' wives
7:00 p. m.—Dinner for 22
9:00 p. m.—Judicial Reception
Wednesday
4:00 p. m.—Tea for 266 guests
5:00 p. m.—Tea for 256 guests
Thursday
1:00 p. m.—Formal luncheon for 52 guests
4:00 p. m.—Tea, Women's Division of Infantile Paralysis Foundation
5:00 p. m.—Tea for Executive Board of the Federation of Women's Clubs
Friday
1:00 p. m.—Lunch for wives of Cabinet members
8:00 p. m.—Diplomatic dinner—94 guests. 197 additional guests for music after dinner.

I am also giving some figures of the number of people who visited the White House in normal years as well as the number who had tea, lunch or dinner or evening refreshments at the White House.

4729 for Meals

DURING the year of 1939: 4729 people came to a meal; 323 people were house guests; 9211 people came to tea.

14,056 people were received at teas, receptions, and the like, and all of them had some light refreshments.

1,320,300 people visited the public rooms and 264,060 had special passes from their Congressmen to see the state dining room, the Red Room, the Blue Room and the Green Room.

The average attendance at Easter Egg Rolling was 53,108. The record shows that 180 children were lost and found; 2 people were sent to the emergency hospital; 6 people fainted; 22 had to be treated for small abrasions.

At the end of the day after Easter Egg Rolling the grounds were really a shambles, but—thanks to the men who took care of them—by 9 o'clock the next morning they were as neat and tidy and beautiful as ever.

After I finished the morning routine of seeing the three people I have already mentioned—Mrs. Nesbitt, Mrs. Helm and the usher—Miss Thompson came into my sitting room to begin work on the mail. For this chore we had to work out a completely new system.

Consulting with Mr. Ralph Magee, head of the correspondence bureau, we found that most of the mail in former administrations had been answered by form letters. He even had copies of forms used in President Cleveland's administration. Whether a correspondent asked for a handkerchief for a church bazaar or for a white elephant he or she was told: "Mrs. — has had so many similar requests, it is not possible to accede to your . . ."

I decided that the times were too serious and the request too desperate to have mail answered in that way, so none of my letters was answered by Form Number-so-and-so.

Miss Thompson read the mail and prepared answers for those she could handle, sometimes for her own signature and sometimes for mine. Letters of special interest to me, and those which she felt she could not answer, were put in a basket for me. Letters to be signed were put on my desk before Miss Thompson went home or just before dinner if she happened to be staying for the evening. My personal letters were always given to me unopened. Because of Miss Thompson's long association with me she could recognize the handwriting and addresses of my family and personal friends.

Mail Major Chore

AFTER I had fulfilled my obligations to my guests, whether at formal or informal parties, I signed the mail and read such letters as I had not seen before, wrote on other letters an outline of what I wanted said in reply and laid aside those which required a dictated answer. This often kept me busy far into the night. Before I went to bed I returned these baskets to Miss Thompson's desk so she could work on them in the morning. As soon as she came to my desk in the morning we attended to the letters to be dictated.

Personal work, such as my column, articles, books, radio scripts and so on was always done on overtime, for which I personally compensated Miss Thompson so that there could be no question of her using time that belonged to the Government for work that was purely personal. This work was done in the evenings and on Saturdays and Sundays.

The table beside my desk was always piled high with manuscripts sent to me to read and criticize, Government documents and reports to keep me up to date and countless other material. I made it a practice, if I found anything interesting in my reading or in my mail, to put it on the table next to my husband's bed so he could look at it at night. I learned to save anything I wanted to tell him till he was in bed, for that was apt to be the only quiet time in the whole day.

As conditions changed for the better my mail dropped off, but if anything disturbed the public it immediately increased. From March 1933, to the end of the year I received 301,000 pieces of mail. Just before the 1940 election I received about 100,000 letters a year. The campaign for a third term, the draft and various other Administration measures caused it to increase. During the war it assumed large proportions but was, of course, of an entirely different character than it had been during the depression years.

In all of the 12 years I cannot remember my office making any mistakes that were embarrassing to my husband or me. For that I pay tribute to the meticulous care with which the work was always done.

Press Conferences

IN adition to the regular duties I have already mentioned there were my press conferences. I had soon discovered that the women reporters in Washington were living precariously. People were losing their jobs on every hand in every field, and unless the women reporters could find something new to write about the chances were that some of them would hold their jobs a very short time.

I realized that I must never trespass on my husband's prerogatives, that national and international news must be handled by him in his press conferences. Nevertheless it seemed to me that there were many things even connected with my own activities which might be useful if well written up. It was new and untried ground, and I confess I was feeling my way with some trepidation.

I shall never forget my first press conference. It was held in the Red Room on the first floor of the White House. I could feel the disapproval of the ushers as I entered the room in fear and trembling, trying to cover my uncertainty by passing around a large box of candy to fill in the first awkward moments.

Louis Howe was responsible for my confidence in newspaper reporters. He had a very high regard for his own craft and insisted that journalists were the most honorable group in the world. I took it for granted that the women would be as honorable as the men, and by and large my confidence was very seldom betrayed.

During the early White House days when I was busy with getting settled and organizing my side of the household, my husband was meeting one problem after another. I think it had a most exhilarating effect upon him. Decisions were being made, new ideas were being tried, people were going to work, and men of business who ordinarily would have scorned Government assistance were begging the Government to find solutions for their problems. Not only were they asking advice, they were willingly accepting anything that was suggested.

What was interesting to me about the Administration of those days was the eagerness with which everyone cooperated with everyone else. As conditions grew better, of course, people's attitudes changed, but fundamentally I am sure it was that spirit of cooperation that pulled us out of the depression. Congress, which has a traditionally short honeymoon with any new President—even when the political majority is of his party—continued faithful during those first months, delegating powers to the President and passing legislation it would never have passed except during a crisis.

Guest Problem

ALL OF THIS meant, however, that Franklin was very busy and had no time for personal interests. Consequently very soon after we went to Washington I realized that if I wanted friends and members of the family to visit us in the White House I would have to take the initiative. My husband, I knew, would be delighted to see them and would never question whom I invited or when they came. Our guests, however, could not be permitted to interfere with the work he had to do. And their comfort and pleasure would have to be solely my responsibility.

Soon after the Inauguration of 1933, however, we began to have a succession of visitors whom Franklin would take upstairs to his study after dinner. It was generally understood that he would not be disturbed unless he asked us to join him.

There were two very simple reasons why these particular visitors were invited to the White House by Franklin during these first years. One was that the economic and political situation in the world made it necessary for him to establish contacts with the leaders; the other was his desire to build new contacts for better understanding on this continent and abroad.

The routine of the visits was always similar. Sometimes we had just a quiet family dinner, after which Franklin took the visitor or visitors up to his study in the oval room for a talk. Sometimes there was an official dinner. When there was a lady present in the visiting party we included the ladies of the Cabinet or the wives of the Government officials whom we were inviting. If it were a man alone, Franklin made it an official stag dinner or an official stag luncheon.

Song In the Rain

The song that I remember best . . . Is one that brings me tears . . . And leads me gently by the hand . . . To all the yesteryears . . . The melancholy melody . . . That mingles in the rain . . . And wistfully reminds me with . . . Its sad and sweet refrain . . . Of days that brought me happiness . . . And nights of silent bliss . . . When all my dreams of beauty bright . . . Were blended with a kiss . . . The music lingers in the air . . . And in my broken heart . . . But there is only emptiness . . . Where lovers had to part . . . And though each flower in the spring . . . May offer me a friend . . . I know the sun must slip away . . . And every song must end.

Sundial Indicates That It's Later Than You Think

Mort Robins of 3535 Valley dr., Alexandria, Va., forwards a report which I trust my good friend Eddie Gallaher of WTOP will explain forthwith.

Mort says that after the Sundial had spun along for a while the other morning Eddie took time out for a commercial for the Columbia Federal Savings and Loan Association, concluding with Columbia Federal's slogan: "Save today, enjoy tomorrow."

Then Eddie gave the Sundial another spin, and announced: "Our next selection will be Tony Martin singing 'There's No Tomorrow.'"

I don't know whether the sponsor realizes it, but that's the sort of propaganda that tempts me to run right down to the bank, draw out my entire $6.42, and go off on a wild spree. If there's to be no tomorrow, I'll be darned if I want to be stuck with a lot of unspent savings.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Pretty little male spitz-shepherd dog, 3 months old; white with black eye and ears." (Decatur 9892.)

"Beautiful, gentle female Irish setter, AKC registered." (Oliver 7060.)

"Four cute kittens, and two female cats." (Overlook 3620.)

"Affectionate, housebroken 2-month-old tiger kitten." (Hudson 4654 after 6 p. m. or all day Sunday.)

"Two puppies, predominantly cocker, 8 weeks old, female." (Shepherd 4935.)

YES, MASTIFF

I know you're under pressure, Boss,
And working endlessly
On rush jobs, deadlines, and the like,
But I'll help willingly.

You've no excuse to bark at me
And raise the office roof.
Just state your needs in civil tones
Or I might answer: "Woof!"

E. Culbreth.

PROTECTORATE

If Maryland and Virginia don't settle their oyster war pretty soon, the Russians may demand U. N. intervention, with Soviet occupation of the disputed territory.

CAUSE AND EFFECT

"What has happened to the J-1 bus line?" asks Mrs. Claire Greenbaum of 710 Oneida pl. nw.

"The service has been cut down to the point where it's just terrible. The buses run so irregularly, and spaced so far apart, that it almost seems they've quit running entirely."

Vice President E. C. Giddings of Capital Transit sighs when he hears complaints like that, and then answers like this:

"The amount of business on a line determines the amount of service we provide for it. If the buses don't run frequently enough, it's because we can't provide any greater number of buses on the amount of revenue the line produces.

"In other words, tell Mrs. Greenbaum that if she and her friends would ride buses more frequently we could afford to provide more frequent bus service."

Of course Mrs. Greenbaum's rebuttal could very well be: "If you provided more buses, you'd get more riders."

As soon as I figure out whether it was the chicken or the egg that came first, I'll render an opinion in the Capital Transit case.

Liquor Racketeers Change Line

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's Note—This is the second of Drew Pearson's columns on gambling racketeers and how they affect our various branches of Government.)

In 1932, when Franklin Roosevelt advocated the repeal of prohibition, one big argument was that liquor racketeers had become a law unto themselves, a group above the Government. That argument was valid. But now the old liquor racketeers have moved into the gambling racket where they still remain a law unto themselves.

COSTELLO

Last year a rash of stories on Frankie Costello were published by Time, Newsweek and Edward Folliard of The Washington Post, a great newspaperman. These stories told how Costello lunched in style at the Waldorf, wore custom-made clothes, owned an office building on Wall Street.

Unwittingly, these articles tended to paint such a glorified picture of America's No. 1 gambler that an impressionable youngster might have been persuaded that this was the life for him.

It was even pointed out that Costello still lived with the same wife; completely ignoring the files of the New York Police Department which are filled with recordings of obscene telephone conversations between Costello and a score of mistresses.

The tragic fact is that Costello and the gang leaders he represents have succeeded to an amazing degree not only in making crime pay but in making it respectable. That is not a lesson that we want taught our youth.

Furthermore, when any one group in our society sets itself up as more powerful than another, democracy breaks down.

Could Be Deported

Hitherto Costello's chief influence has been in the big cities—New York, Miami and Los Angeles. But now he appears to be able to reach inside the Federal Government.

The amazing fact is that Costello could be deported from the United States and sent back to Italy tomorrow if the Justice Department wanted to. For, when Costello swore out his American citizenship papers in 1925, he perjured himself regarding his criminal record. Countless other immigrants have been deported for doing exactly the same thing, but they have lacked something which Costello has—influence.

At this very moment, another immigrant, Harry Bridges, is on trial in San Francisco on exactly the same charge—perjury in connection with his citizenship papers

This column holds no brief for Bridges. But everyone should be treated equally.

Costello's Partners

President Truman, I am convinced, knows nothing about Costello influence inside the Government and would not stand for it if he did. Nevertheless, Costello appears to have a powerful friend inside the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and this column has previously published the details on the fixing of a Federal tax-fraud case involving Los Angeles gamblers.

Last summer, Senator Clyde Hoey's committee, while investigating former White House friend John Maragon, came across the trails of Costello's partner, "Dandy Phil" Kastel, and of Bill Helis, the "Golden Greek," another partner of Costello's, who had been a contributor to the Truman campaign.

Maragon was found to have a secret banking account in San Antonio, Tex., which over a period of time contained as much as $43,957—a lot of money for a man who complained that his salary averaged around $4000 annually. Furthermore, most of Maragon's transactions were in cash—the coin of the underworld.

Maragon and General Vaughan also had enough power inside the Truman Administration to overrule a housing order against the remodeling of California's Tanforan race track after being introduced to the track's owners by Costello's partner, Helis.

Though Costello probably makes most of his money in gambling, one source of revenue is his partnership with "Dandy Phil" Kastel, Bill Helis and Irving Haim, as sales agents for the House of Lords and King's Ransom whiskies. When Republican Senators stumbled into this connection last summer, Helis immediately issued a vigorous denial. He said that at no time had he ever been associated with Costello in connection with the Whiteley Co., owners of House of Lords and King's Ransom.

The Official Record

However, here is part of the official, though confidential record regarding the partnership of White House friend Bill Helis, Frankie Costello and "Dandy Phil" Kastel:

November 8, 1937—A note for $225,000 to Irving Haim at the Whitney National Bank in New Orleans was indorsed by Phil Kastel, William Helis and Frank Costello.

In 1938—Kastel owed C. D. Jennings of Chicago $45,000 for slot machines. So a note for the debt was signed by Kastel and Robert Friedberg with Alliance Distributors stock certificates put up as collateral. Alliance Distributors is the name under which Costello, Kastel and Helis operate. To meet the note, Alliance Distributors arranged to sell 2000 cases of whisky and turn the proceeds over to C. D. Jennings.

August 23, 1938—Bill Helis paid Irving Haim's note for $225,000 at the Whitney National Bank with his personal check for that amount.

September 15, 1938—An agreement was executed between Irving Haim and William Helis giving Helis an interest in J. G. Turney & Sons, Ltd., the holding company for King's Ransom and House of Lords whiskies.

September 16, 1938—A receipt was signed by Helis for 10,000 ordinary shares and 35,000 preferred shares of stock.

Who Told the Lie?

September 1, 1939—Lloyd Cobb, Helis' man in New Orleans, wrote A. G. Reynolds, Helis' man in London, inclosing a clipping from the Washington Merry-Go-Round, linking Helis to Frank Costello.

January 13, 1941—An interoffice memo from A. G. Reynolds indicated that Phil Kastel's $100,000 note and Haim's $225,000 note hadn't been paid. The memo referred to a letter agreement between Helis and Haim whereby both notes would be repaid by Haim.

July 27, 1943—George Uffner came to New York from New Orleans to see Costello. Costello, calling Uffner on the phone, said: "You and Bill Helis meet me in the lobby tonight at 7 o'clock. If Alfange wants to see me that will be all right." (Dean Alfange is Helis' lawyer, who also issued a denial last summer that Helis was ever connected with Costello.)

February, 1947—Helis, when interviewed by the New York State Liquor Authority, stated that Haim had paid all money owed him, and that he and Haim now owned equal shares in J. G. Turney & Son.

August, 1949—William Helis denied to the press that he had ever been associated with Frank Costello in connection with the Whitnew Co., the wholly owned subsidiary of J. G. Turney & Son.

...with Pat Parker

TWO WEEKS AGO, just before the holidays, we started this column on Center Market City. Since it was holiday time, we've had little chance to tell you about the Market itself.

SO TODAY, we'd like to tell you something about this great acre of fine foods, something about its history—and the people who make it the fascinating place it is.

THE GREAT marketplace at 5th and K is the result of the merging of many markets. But the faithful Market shoppers of today love good food just as they did in days when President James Polk's table was graced with produce from Northern Liberty Market which stood where the Public Library now stands. The old Center Market on Pennsylvania Avenue, and many other local markets were forerunners of the present gleaming, glistening Market on K Street.

MANY are the famous Washington hostesses who have patronized merchants and their sons for generations. Too numerous to list are the Embassies and Legations which have standing orders at some of the Market's famous stands.

AT The New York Beef Company, for instance, owner Charles J. Johnson remembers 35 years of White House and Embassy customers. Presidents, Ambassadors, Supreme Court Justices, Senators and Representatives have all been among his customers. Today, his list of "standing customers" reads like a listing of the Great of Washington.

FRED WEIGERT is another stand-owner who has long catered to White House tastes. The late President Franklin D. Roosevelt's housekeeper often ordered the fresh sausages and baby lima beans for which the Weigert's Maryland farm is famous.

BUT the greatness of the Market is due to a long list of Washingtonians who loved good food. Perhaps they are not so famous, but they knew where to find fresh produce; where to find ingredients for exotic dishes; where to find courteous service—a delightful atmosphere.

TODAY'S Washingtonians know, too. They shop at
